GREASE-PROOF SILKS.

Tapissier Frores, Lyon. Yes, this is the name on our invoice head, and our silks are stamped on the border correctly. We have also a tolerably fair supply—some 5000 yards—and if the silk turns out well, we can wire for any quantity. So far, satisfactory. Now, as to price. We paid cash for our parcel, and we bought at the lowest cash price. More, we are selling the goods at the lowest cash price, which means that the public who have ready money to spend can come and purchase from us to the best advantage. We can give any house that sells on credit 25 per cent. and a beating wherever foreign silks are concerned, and these grease-proof silks, we are determined, shall be no exception to our custom in this respect. FARMER and CO.

MILLINERY.

Each mail steamer brings us the latest Paris novelties, Paris trimmed Hats, Paris trimmed Bonnets, for ladies and misses. French milliners, if they make mistakes at all, make fewer and less glaring mistakes than the sisterhood in London. There are no vulgar oddities in Parisian millinery; no incongruous combinations of colour. At one time we contented ourselves with importing sample hats and bonnets; now we get nearly all we sell from Paris. Besides, we have on our staff here, several French milliners from the most fashionable establishments on the Boulevards, who undertake the best description of order work. What a change there is in the price of millinery under our cash system.

FARMER and CO.

MOURNING of every description, and at the lowest prices, for prompt cash. A steady, persistent exercise of economy is ever a grave duty, but doubly so in circumstances where, deprived of its head and staff, a family is thrown with straitened resources upon the world. Buy your mourning for ready money only.

FARMER and CO.

DRESS MATERIALS.

Our prices for every description of dress fabrics are the lowest wholesale. We are first in the field with the new styles; and our Dress Department offers, as far we know, the best assortment in the city. This is a consideration, as it saves trouble in making your selection. We have some high-class ranges on show this week in a variety of new materials. Prices range 6½d, 7½d, 8½d, 10½d, 1s, and on to 2s 6d. Patterns free per post.

FARMER and CO.

THE NEW YEAR'S COSTUME.

A nice Silk Costume for presentation, and not too expensive either—18 yards for 47s 6d. FARMER and CO.

HOSE, STOCKINGS, CHAUSSES.

"At the close of the sixteenth century, William Lee, Master of Arts, and Fellow of St. John's, Cambridge, invented a stocking frame. Tradition attributes this invention to a pique he had taken against a woman with whom he was in love, but who did not return his passion. She got her livelihood by knitting stockings, and with the base view of depreciating the poor girl's employment, he is said to have constructed this frame, at which he first worked himself, and then taught his brother and some other relatives." . . . Altogether a pattern young man, this William Lee, was'nt he! Would'nt his college chums be particularly proud of him after that interesting little episode? The fellow evidently had some bad blood in him, which, despite his University training, asserted itself. But worthless as were his motives, his invention did some service. It alarmed and irritated the stocking knitters; but it gave the public better stockings. Poorer people got to be able to afford a pair of Hose, and finally, what was for the most part, a barelegged generation, was helped to decently clad extremities through sweet William's unreturned passion. Before William Lee's invention the commonest cloth hose couldn't be purchased under a royal or twenty shillings a pair. Now by spending your ready cash at Victoria House, you can buy Ladies' Balbriggan Hose Hose, Embroidered Silk at 10½d, 12½d, 16d, 18d, 20d, 22½d; Ladies' Coloured Balbriggan Hose, at 12½d; Ladies' Navy, Seal, and Black Balbriggan Hose, fast colours, 16½d; Ladies' White Cotton Hose, 12d, and a variety of Cashmere, Spun, Silk, and Lisle Thread Hose, at proportionately low prices.

FARMER and CO.

DRESS TRIMMINGS, HABERDASHERY.

There is no place in the city where a lady can more surely depend on getting exactly what she wants in the way of trimmings than in our warehouse. As for Haberdashery, we keep the best make only, and will never alter in this respect. The cost of a dozen of cotton or tape, or a packet of needles or pins of the best quality, is never much more than is the cost of the commonest. In Haberdashery we sell the best goods made, 25 per cent lower than any other house. Prompt cash only. FARMER and CO.

FANCY DEPARTMENT.

Black Satin Sunshades, plain and trimmed lace, 6s 6d to 21s; ditto, Handpainted, 21s. Ladies' Silk Umbrellas, 7s 6d to 12s 6d. Children's Sunshades, Cotton, 2s 9d; Black Satin, 4s 6d and 5s 6d. Ladies' Cambric Handkerchiefs, plain, 3s 6d to 12s 6d per dozen; hem-stitched, 10s 6d to 17s 6d. Ladies' Fancy Ties, 9d to 2s 6d. All prompt cash prices. FARMER and CO.

RIBBONS.

Evelyn, describing the dress of a fop of his time (Charles II.) says:—"It was a fine silken thing which I espied walking the other day through Westminster Hall, that had as much ribbon about him as would have plundered six shops and set up twenty country pedlars. All his body was dressed like a May-pole, or a Tom o' Bedlam's cap. A fregat newly riggid kept not half such a clatter in a storme as this puppet's streamers did when the wind was in his shrouds; the motion was wonderful to behold, and the well-chosen colours were red, orange and blew, of well-gum'd satin, which argued a happy fancy." Gentlemen don't trouble ribbons much now-a-days; but the ladies make up for any little want of attention on that score. And as it is in trifles, such as ribbons, ties, laces, &c., that much money goes when you can have the article booked, independent of the consideration invariably paid for booking, it behoves all who study economy to pay cash for their ribbons and kindred trifles. FARMER and CO.

HAMMOCKS.

Hammocks are a modern invention, nothing more. They do not appear in the inventory of goods and chattels taken by Noah into the Ark. They are not even mentioned in Cæsar's Commentaries, Virgil's poems, nor, as far as we know, in any of the Greek tragedies. People have to accept them just as they accept Railways, Electric Telegraphs, Telephones, Penny Papers, Bitter Beer, or any other Nineteenth Century nuisance. It is not even known who invented Hammocks. It is supposed that the idea was obtained from the twopenny ropes described by Mr. Sam Weller to Pickwick; but nothing certain, even on this point, can be ascertained. The best Hammocks are made in America by the American Indians—the worst in England, and an indifferent sort in Germany. It's not half a bad thing to rest your wearied limbs in an English hammock, its imperfections notwithstanding. You can bange in a German article any summer's day, sub tegmine Eucalypti, and feel at peace with all men. But would you reach the summit of terrestrial bliss, you have only to tumble into one of those made by the American Indians, describe some figure unknown to geometricians with perfect ease, and while the smoke curls upwards from your mild Havannah, you will thank the goodness and the grace that on your birth has smiled and placed you in this happy land, where, by investing 7s 6d, 10s, 12s 6d, or 15s at FARMER'S, you can any day enjoy such luxury.

CARRIAGE DUST RUGS.

We have them, better and cheaper than last year, in a variety of new styles and colourings. Prices range from 3s 9d to 15s, for prompt cash. FARMER and CO.

BOYS' CLOTHING.

We have studied Boys' Clothing, and to some purpose. We have made such a revolution in Boys' Clothing in a little over eighteen months that our trade in the Juvenile Department has within that period increased tenfold. This is not a harmless fiction, but the plain truth. For every single suit we sold eighteen months since we are now selling ten suits. Why is this? Does it not say in the plainest and most unmistakable manner that our study of juvenile wants has not been a profitless study? The unceasing throng of customers that line our counters—fathers, mothers, and guardians with their little ones waiting to be clothed—proves this. The almost incredible number of country orders which each morning's post brings us proves this also. We have forty thousand Juvenile Suits, in every conceivable style, at prices ranging from 4s 6d to 42s per suit, and if you are not reckless, but of a thrifty economical turn, you, whatever your position, can't afford to pass our warehouse by if you have boys to provide for. FARMER and CO.

HIGH-CLASS TAILORING

On the most approved cash terms. Gentlemen who pay have not to find the money for those who don't. Cutters—Messrs. Shearsby (favourably known to the gentry of Sydney), Quinn (from Poole's Saville Row, London), Paget, Byrnes, and Irish. All goods are marked in plain figures. Gentlemen can consult a printed price card, from which all prices are quoted, to prevent any mistake occuring. Trousers to order from 16s 6d.

FARMER and CO.

THE PLUG HAT.

The plug hat is virtually a sort of social guarantee for the preservation of peace and order. He who puts one on has given a hostage to the community for his good behaviour. The wearer of a plug hat must move with a certain sedateness and propriety. He cannot run, or jump, or romp, or get into a fight, except at the peril of his head gear. All the hidden influences of the beaver tend towards respectability. He who wears one is obliged to keep the rest of his body in decent trim, that there may be no incongruity between head and body. He is apt to become thoughtful through the necessity of watching the sky whenever he goes out. The chances are that he will buy an umbrella, which is another guarantee for good behaviour, and the care of hat and umbrella—perpetual and exacting as it must ever be—adds to the sweetness of his character. The man who wears a plug hat naturally takes to the society of women, with all its elevating tendencies. He cannot go hunting or fishing without abandoning his beloved hat, but in the moderate enjoyment of croquet and lawn tennis he may sport his beaver with impunity. In other words, the constant use of a plug hat makes a man composed in manner, quiet and gentlemanly in conduct, and a companion of the ladies. The inevitable result is prosperity, marriage, and church membership."—We have these items at 17s 6d in Christy's best; price elsewhere 21s. FARMER and CO.

PARQUET FLOORING.

SELECT WALL PAPERS.

Following on their effort to make the best dwelling-houses perfect in every way, as far as their interior is concerned, Messrs. Farmer and Co. have imported a select assortment of expensive Wall Papers, better in style and quality than any hitherto introduced into the colony. They are chiefly in the Early English style. Among them are, however, a few designs in the Louis Seize style, and Messrs. Farmer and Co. are now prepared to undertake entire renovating and furnishing of the better class of residences, in a manner equal to that of most English homes.

FARMER and CO.

PRIZE AUSTRALIAN CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR CARDS.
JOHN SANDS, 374, George-street, Sydney.
The designs selected by Mr. Sands from the Christmas Card Competition, inaugurated by him in May last, are now ready, and may be obtained at all booksellers and stationers in Australia.
These cards are essentially Australian in character, being designed by Australian artists, drawn on stone by Mr. Sands' own lithographers, and printed at his works as above. Purchasers wishing to obtain samples of this new colonial industry are requested to observe that each card bears on it Mr. Sands' trade mark—an Hour-glass. This caution is necessary, as numerous cards are being offered to the public which, although Australian in character, are of European production.
In addition to the cards of his manufacture, Mr. Sands has imported the most varied collection ever seen in the colonies. Those desirous of possessing cards selected with artistic taste, cannot do better than inspect his stock, which includes the various prize designs from the home competitions, together with the best productions from the principal English, Continental, and American manufacturers.
Mr. Sands has also on view the pictures gaining the premiums of One Hundred and Fifty Guineas at his late competitive exhibition at the Art Gallery of New South Wales.

STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS FOR CHILDREN CUTTING TEETH.
CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.
The value of this well-known Family Medicine has been largely tested in all parts of the world, and by all grades of society, for upwards of FIFTY YEARS. Its well-earned extensive sale has induced several IMITATIONS, some of which, in OUTWARD APPEARANCE, so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers. The proprietor, therefore, feels it due to the public to give a special caution against the use of such imitations.
Purchasers are therefore requested carefully to observe the four following distinctive characteristics, without which none are genuine:—
1. In every case the words JOHN STEEDMAN, Chemist, Walworth, Surry, are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to each packet.
2. Each SINGLE powder has directions for the dose, and the words "John Steedman, Chemist, Walworth, Surrey," printed thereon.
3. The name Steedman is always spelt with two EE's.
4. The manufacture is carried on solely at Walworth, Surrey.
Sold in packets by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors, at 1s 1½d and 2s 9d each. Sold in Sydney by ELLIOTT BROTHERS.

"SULPHOLINE LOTION."—An External Means of CURING SKIN DISEASES. There is scarcely any eruption but will yield to "Sulpholine" in a few days, and commence to fade away, even if it seems past cure. Ordinary pimples, redness, blotches, scurf, roughness, vanish as if by magic; whilst old, enduring skin disorders that have plagued the sufferers for years, however deeply rooted they may be, "Sulpholine" will successfully attack them. It destroys the animalculæ which cause these unsightly, irritable, painful affections, and always produces a clear, healthy, natural condition of the skin. ## POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

The Bench on the Criminal side yesterday was composed of Messrs. Dean, Field, Carter, and Hale; on the Summons side Messrs. Senior and Perdriau were the sitting justices.

A great number of persons were charged with disorderly conduct, riotous behaviour, and other offences against the Police Act, and were fined in sums varying from 5s. to 40s. Among them were two boys named Morrissey, who were fined 5s each for throwing bushes upon a fire burning in Market-street; and a man named Murray, who was found burning a tar barrel in Sussex-street on Sunday morning.

Alexander Christie was fined 10s. for smoking in George-street Market on Saturday night.

Frederick Henry, for offending against decency in a public place, off Druitt-street, at 8 o'clock on Saturday evening; and George Brown, for a like offence in Hyde Park, between 9 and 10 a.m. on Monday, were each sentenced to pay 40s., or to be imprisoned one month.

Richard Trevelyan was found guilty, on his own confession, of having assaulted Margaret Tripp, and was sentenced to pay a penalty of 10s., or to be imprisoned 14 days. He also pleaded guilty to a charge of having assaulted Jane Ward, for which offence he was sentenced to be imprisoned one month.

Joseph O'Neill pleaded guilty to having while in custody for drunkenness, assaulted the constable by kicking his shins, and was sentenced to be imprisoned one month. He was further charged with having wilfully and maliciously torn the constable's uniform trousers, which had been six months in wear, the contract price being 23s. 6d., and was on this ground ordered to pay 20s. damages, or to be further imprisoned seven days.

George Stock, charged with having stolen a meerschaum pipe, of the value of 30s., the property of James Douglass, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to be imprisoned seven days.

William Hendren, found guilty of illtreating a horse by using it in harness while suffering from sore shoulders, was ordered to pay a penalty of 20s., or to be imprisoned seven days.

Ernest Perlbergh and Oscar Jarrett were charged with having incited a prisoner named Murray to resist Constable Macintosh in the execution of his duty. Mr. Carroll appeared for the prisoners, and asked that they might be separately charged, so that each might be held responsible for his own acts or words; there was no reason, he submitted, for their being tried together, except to shut them out from the opportunity of giving evidence for each other's defence. The Bench did not accede to the application. Constable Slamon deposed that when Macintosh had a prisoner in custody, for burning a tar barrel in Sussex-street, the defendants said different things, having a tendency to excite resistance on the part of the other prisoner, and he took them in custody. They were adjudged to be guilty, and were sentenced to pay 20s. each, or to be imprisoned seven days.

Perlbergh and Jarrett were then charged with wantonly throwing stones, to the danger of persons passing. On this occasion, each defendant gave evidence for the other that nothing of the kind alleged was done by either. The Bench gave them the benefit of a doubt in this case, and discharged them from custody.

William Keenan was charged by Margaret Holmes with having assaulted her by striking her a violent blow in the mouth with his fist; and, pleading guilty, was sentenced to pay a penalty of 40s., or to be imprisoned 14 days.

Joseph Broadhurst and Henry Williams were severally sentenced to pay 40s., or to be imprisoned one month, for having, when in custody for drunkenness, assaulted the officers who apprehended them.

William Smith was charged with stealing in a dwelling. Jane Denway deposed that on Monday afternoon she left home to call on a neighbour, leaving the front door ajar, and shortly afterward received information which led her to go after the prisoner, whom she found in the act of offering for sale a Bible, her property, which during her brief absence had been stolen from her house; she valued it at £4 10s. Prisoner was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions.

Alexander M'Beath was convicted on the prosecution of Sergeant Keating of having on the 13th December wilfully and obscenely exposed himself in Victoria Park, and was sentenced to be imprisoned fourteen days.

Peter Anderson, found on the premises of Christopher Fallon between the hours of 1 and 2 a.m. of Tuesday, was adjudged to have been there for an unlawful purpose, and was sentenced to be imprisoned one month.

On the Summons side, Isaac Solomon appeared to answer an information in which Inspector Anderson alleged that he did on the 19th December, in violation of the Act legalizing art unions, in the premises known as the old Victoria Theatre, dispose of different kinds of wares to different persons by a chance, such disposal not being for the benefit of any religious or charitable institution, and by Mr. Slattery pleaded cause to show. Detective Tindale deposed that on the day named he went to the old Victoria Theatre, where he saw defendant and Mrs. Solomon; he paid 6d. for admittance and received a pocket book containing a ticket on which were the words "You can change this for a picture frame;" he afterwards handed the ticket to Mrs. Solomon and received from her a picture frame (produced); he afterwards spoke to defendant about it, who told him that it was not for the benefit of any but himself. Mr. Slattery cross-examined the witness, and addressed the bench for the defence. Their Worships held the offence to be proved, and imposed a fine of 1s. A number of defendants were fined in sums varying from 5s. to 20s. for offences against the Police Act; and two were fined 40s. each for offences against the Vagrant Act.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, Mr. Marsh was occupied in disposing of a number of small debt cases, while Messrs. Reading, Hunt, and Nelson occupied the Bench in the Charge Court, and Messrs. Penfold, Jenkins, and Goodridge that in the Summons Court.

James Lowe was brought up on remand on a charge of obtaining the sum of £2 10s. from Mr. William Henry Pratt, assistant paymaster of Mort's Dock and Engineering Company, by means of a false pretence, and with intent to defraud. It seemed that Lowe, who was employed at Mort's Dock, at the time of receiving his wages, on Saturday, 3rd December, presented an order for the payment of £2 10s., being the amount of wages due to another employee named W. Murray. The money was paid, and when the order was shown to Murray he stated that the signature attached to it was a forgery. Two witnesses, named G. Johnson and O. Crowther, were called for the defence, and deposed that on December 2 they were at Murray's house and heard him authorize the accused to write out an order and draw the money for the "missis" (meaning Mrs. Murray). Lowe was committed for trial at the next Quarter Sessions. Bail was allowed—the accused in his own bond of £40; and two sureties of £20 each.

Ann Richardson and Ann Jones, on charges of being common prostitutes, wandering about and behaving in an indecent manner, were sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for four months.

Bartholomew Kennedy was charged with offending against decency at Mosman Bay, and was fined 20s.

A number of men were brought up for riotous behaviour and assaulting constables at Manly, and were fined various sums.

William Oxley, a seaman, for deserting from his vessel, the Zuleika, was fined 40s.

James Palmer, driver of an omnibus, was charged by Mr. George Webber, Inspector of the Animals Protection Society, with ill-treating three horses by driving them in an omnibus when they were not fit for work. The defendant pleaded guilty, adding that he had to drive the horses, as if he did not do so some one else would do. The three horses were outside the court, and were noticed to be in a wretched condition. Two appeared to have been nearly starved; at any rate their bones were very prominent. Both the "wheelers" had sore shoulders; one of the horses had three or four wounds, the largest of which was about the size of an egg. None of the animals seemed to be fit for work. The omnibus also bore evidences of neglect, a spoke of one of the fore wheels having been broken out and another damaged. A fine of 40s. was imposed.

James Vaughan was charged with wilfully damaging a door, value £2, the property of Mr. James Pringle. It seemed that the defendant went to Mr. Pringle's house at Surry Hills and asked for a person named Berry, who was not there. Because the defendant was not allowed to enter the house he smashed the glass window and the door. He was ordered to pay the damage.

LICENSING BUSINESS.—Messrs. Hunt and Reading disposed of a number of applications for licenses, in dealing with some of which they were assisted by Messrs. Purves and Nelson. Auctioneers' licenses were granted to the following applicants:—W. H. Richardson, J. Solomon, T. S. Clibborn, W. B. Solling, R. C. Beverage, Wm. Tuford, F. L. Barker, F. O. Raymond, Geo. W. Vinden, J. W. Purves, P. N. Trebeck, John Jeffreys, Timothy Johnson, Morton Joseph, James M'Lees, Robert Richards, C. H. Kahler, and William Garling. Hawkers' licenses were granted as follows:—William Fortier, Johanna Parker, John Cameron, William Kent, John Slater, Joseph Lipstritz, William Young, P. Doyle, T. Johnson, See Hoy, Ah Hip, Lee Pan, S. Morris, Ching Fong, Ah Sing, Ah King, Wing Chong, Michael Kelleher, Ah Rock, How Chay, Charles Duffy, Peter Daley, William M'Kewin, Francis Austin, Hugh Carleton, Jas. Walker, R. C. James, H. L. Jordan, Tobias Mahler, and N. J. Purcell. The transfer of a publican's license from E. Haddon to J. A. Saunders, and of another from A. Sandeman to Mr. Kershaw, was authorized. J. Hammond applied for a slaughtering license, but it was refused. Thomas Charnley applied for permission to remove his license from the Victoria Inn to a house in Castlereagh-street. The application was opposed by Inspector Anderson. Mr. Gannon, who appeared on behalf of the police, pointed out that the application was made under the old Act, and the Bench were asked to adjudicate under the new one. He contended that the magistrates had no jurisdiction, as there was no power conferred upon them to deal with the application. Mr. Shorter, who appeared in support of the application, urged that the Bench had full jurisdiction to deal with that matter, as they had not been deprived of any power which they exercised under the old Licensing Act. The licensee, he contended, had had conferred upon him, by reason of his holding a license, certain rights and privileges which would continue until the 30th June, when the license would expire. He argued that the new Act provided that rights which had been acquired prior to the passing of such Act should not be interfered with or affected by the new measure, and that therefore it was competent for the Bench to grant the removal. He also stated that no provision was made in the new Act with reference to the removal of licenses from one house to another. As the Bench—which now consisted of Messrs. Hunt and Reading—were unable to agree, no order was made.

NEWTOWN POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, before Messrs. J. Graham and F. S. Fielder, J's. P., nine men and boys were fined from 1s. to 10s. each with 2s. 6d. costs, or one to four days' imprisonment, for bathing at midday in Cook's River, on the Warren Estate and foot of Wardell's-road. John Royce, for riotous behaviour and using obscene language, was fined £2 10s. and 7s. 4d. costs, with the alternative of 21 days' imprisonment. Twelve cases under the Municipalities Act were dealt with, also five cases under the Police Acts.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

An inquest was held yesterday by the City Coroner, at the Castle Connell Hotel, on the body of Jabez Bunting, who was found dead head downwards in a cask at his residence, No. 61, Wellington-street, on Monday morning last. Caroline Bunting, wife of deceased, deposed that deceased was 49 years of age, a tailor by trade, and had been about 40 years in the colony; he had left four children; he had been suffering for some years from rheumatic gout, and had been low-spirited lately, saying that he could not make things meet; he was in arrears with his rent, and on Monday week last his landlord told him he would have to leave the following Monday; deceased was only able to earn about 7s. last week, and the notice he received from his landlord seemed to have affected him very much; he had often said, when suffering from the gout, that he wished he was dead, but witness never heard him say that he would do away with himself; witness last saw him alive shortly before 4 o'clock on Monday morning; he had got up to call his youngest son to go to work; before going downstairs he took the money he had out of his pocket and gave it to witness, saying that she could do better with it than he could, and he then went downstairs and never returned; when he went down he said he was going to lie on the board, and as he did not return witness thought he had done so and fallen asleep, and witness remained in her room until she was called by her daughter-in-law, about 7 o'clock, who told witness something which caused witness to go down stairs to the yard, where she saw her husband with his head immersed in a small cask of water; his feet were on the ground and his hands by his side; witness screamed and at once lifted her husband's head out of the water, and her daughter Emma, 20 years of age, came to her assistance, and lifted deceased out; before her daughter came witness found that there was a rope with a tailor's goose attached tied round deceased's neck; on her daughter's arrival witness told her to cut the rope, and she got a pair of scissors, and they conjointly cut the rope, and recognised both the rope and the "goose" as being the property of the deceased; he was then dead; witness and her daughter were the only adults in the house, and her infant grandchild was the only other person in the house when witness found deceased as described. Emma Bunting, daughter of deceased, gave corroborative evidence. Dr. Wrigley, who was called in to see deceased shortly after he was found in the manner described, gave evidence as to the cause of death, which was from suffocation by submersion in water; deceased had been dead apparently about an hour. Percy Bunting deposed that his father had called him at about 20 minutes past 4 o'clock on Monday morning, and sent him for his brother, and he and his brother were passing the door of the house when they saw their father at the door, and he wished them good-bye; when witness left home, his father and a young man, named Patrick Loughlan, who slept in the house the night before, were standing at the door; witness saw nothing more of his father alive. William Nicoll, a coachmaker, residing at 66, Wellington-street, deposed that on Monday morning, at a quarter-past 6 o'clock, he was in his yard, and noticed the deceased in his own yard at the water-cask with one side on the cask, and his head in the cask, as though he was cleaning it out; at a later period witness noticed him in the same position, and called out to him, but got no answer; there was no other person in the yard at the time, and the inmates of the house appeared to be in bed; upon getting no answer witness's suspicions were excited, and witness at once went for deceased's son, who lives some doors lower down in the same street; witness rapped for some time, when the son's wife answered and said her husband was not at home; witness told her his suspicions, and she went to her father-in-law's house, where she rapped for some time, and witness returned to his premises, and from there saw the deceased taken from the water-cask and laid on the ground; he then saw that there were a rope and a tailor's goose lying alongside of the deceased; he had known deceased for some time, but did not observe any change in him lately; he heard no noise in the deceased's yard previously to seeing him in the position described. This was all the evidence; and the jury found that deceased had drowned himself.

WRECK OF THE YACHT SECRET.

"The yacht left Port Phillip Heads on the 23rd ultimo, and experienced fine weather to the eastern passage. She anchored under Cape Wollomai. Thence on the 24th she had fair weather to Waratah Bay, where Christmas Day was spent. On the 26th she went to the Promontory, with a fresh breeze to Refuge Cove. On the 27th, went from Refuge Cove to Corner Inlet, where she anchored under Mount Singapore. On the 28th the party proceeded towards Lewis Channel, and landed Messrs. M'Evoy, Bevan, and Goulstone, jun., on Snake Island, for shooting. The weather was fine, and the glass high. About 2 p.m. the glass suddenly fell, and a tremendous west-north-west gale burst unexpectedly on the vessel. A line was run to the beacon and anchor in port bow, to try and veer her and then slip, but both parted like packthread, and the vessel beat in upon the banks and laboured terribly, the sea washing over her. She was in great danger of breaking up entirely, as each sea seemed likely to drive her keel in. To save life and property, after consultation, the captain resolved to harden her in, hoisted the mainsail with three reefs and the foresail with great difficulty, the wind blowing a gale and the sea being a mass of blinding scud. The tackle held by this means hardened her in some distance, and then all hands took the sail off her, and went below to wait the fall of the tide and wind. At 1 a.m. on Thursday morning Mr. Purves waded ashore, and found Messrs. M'Evoy, Bevan, and the boy camped, and much exhausted. After making unsuccessful search for assistance—Little Snake Island being apparently uninhabited, and being covered with frightful scrub, with no water obtainable—he got Messrs. M'Evoy and Bevan on board, leaving the boy at the fire. At daybreak Captain Shepherd got the boy, who had let the fire out and was in the mangroves, on board. Then all hands got provisions and bedding on shore, about a quarter of a mile from the sea, to form a camp. The water on board was exhausted, and none was to be found ashore. About 11, the only boat—a small dingy—was carried about 7 feet across the spit to Lewis Channel, and Mr. Purves and a sailor started for Welshpool. At that time all hands were busy carrying things ashore, after doing which they intended digging for water, rigging a sail for a tent, and getting a fire lit to dry their clothes and bedding and warm some food, of which they were all much in need, after their rough trip. The wind was very high, and the dingy reached Welshpool only to find it deserted. The sea was breaking on board. Clifford, the sailor, remained there to await a lull in the storm and cross to the island, beach the dingy, and make for the camp. Mr. Purves started for Port Albert, picked up an old track, and then the telegraph wire, which he followed for about 13 miles, to within four miles of Alberton, when, being completely knocked up, he was hospitably received by Michael Kenall, at Lumsden's selection. He slept there that night, and next morning walked to Alberton, where where he got some food, and thence to Port Albert, arriving about half-past 9, when he telegraphed to the owners. All at the wreck were well when he left, but much exhausted from anxiety and the labour of carrying goods through mangroves and scrub in wet clothes. Mr. Purves telegraphed to Foster to have a boat sent thence, as there was a fair wind, to pick up the passengers and luggage and bring them here. The Secret lies off the point of Little Snake Island, about 400 yards from shore, and half a mile from Lewis Channel. She is dry at low water, and in about four feet of water at high tide. The yacht is much strained, and works when partly borne."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your sub-leader in this day's Herald on the appointment and duties of the new stipendiary magistrates you have omitted one very important and arduous portion of their duties—namely, the Small Debts Court business, which has hitherto occupied one day each week at the Central and Water Police Courts, and every alternate Wednesday at the Newtown Court, and as population increases the business is not likely to become less.

If the stipendiaries are (in addition to their other duties) to compose the Licensing Courts their appointments are not likely to become sinecures.

Clause 5 of the new Licensing Act is as follows:—"Provided always that the metropolitan licensing district so to be proclaimed shall comprise the whole of the county of Cumberland." The Act also states that the court shall consist of not more than seven persons, three to form a quorum.

The county of Cumberland comprises a large area, extending seaward from Bulli to Broken Bay. It includes the towns of Windsor, Richmond, Penrith, Liverpool, Campbelltown, Appin, Parramatta, the city of Sydney and suburbs. At the Water Police and Central Police Courts it will be necessary to hold Courts once a week; at the Redfern and Newtown Courts at least alternate weeks; and at Parramatta, Windsor, Campbelltown, and Penrith once a month. As all offences against the Act must be tried by the board, as also transfers and removals, it would be manifestly unfair to those engaged in the business if they could not within a reasonable time effect the same.

However desirable it may be that this business should be performed by these gentlemen, experience will show that it will be utterly impossible for them to perform it, without the addition of at least four gentlemen to the board, otherwise the ordinary business of the police courts will be brought to a deadlock, as is frequently the case in the Supreme Court.

Yours, &c.,
NEMO.

PASTURES AND STOCK PROTECTION ACT AMENDMENT ACT.

As the Act recently passed to amend the Pastures and Stock Protection Act is one of considerable interest to a large section of the community, we give the text of it in full:—

Whereas it is expedient to amend the "Pastures and Stock Protection Act." Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly of New South Wales in Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same as follows:—

1. This Act may be cited as the "Pastures and Stock Protection Act Amendment Act of 1881," and shall be read and construed with the "Pastures and Stock Protection Act," hereinafter termed the Principal Act.

2. The fifth, seventh, eighth, fourteenth, twenty-second, and twenty-eighth sections, and schedule A of the Principal Act are hereby repealed.

3. Any owner of not less than ten head of large stock, or the duly authorized superintendent of any owner of not less than one thousand head thereof, may be elected a director, and may vote at the election of directors under the Principal Act. And the number of votes to be given by any such owner or superintendent shall be in accordance with the scale contained in the schedule hereto. All questions as to the qualifications of such owners or superintendents as candidates or electors shall be settled by reference to the rate-book. If in any district no directors or an insufficient number of directors be elected, the Minister charged with the administration of the Act may appoint a sufficient number of persons to be directors, whether possessed of the aforesaid qualification or not.

4. The board, three members of which shall form a quorum, shall have power to take all proper and lawful measures to ensure the destruction within its district of all noxious animals within the operation of this Act, and for that purpose may, out of the money raised under this Act, pay for that destruction such sums by way of bonus for the scalps of such animals at such rate as the said board may from time to time determine at meetings specially called for that purpose, of which not less than 10 days' clear notice shall have been given, and the rates so determined by the board shall be published in the Gazette, and in one or more newspapers circulating in the district. Provided that where in any case the Principal Act requires a director to sign a certificate of the delivery or destruction of scalps, it shall be deemed to be sufficient if such certificate be signed by any person duly authorized by the board in that behalf.

5. It shall be the duty of every owner of land to make effective provision for and to ensure the destruction of all noxious animals at large in a wild state upon such land. And upon the failure of such owner to perform such duty, such board is hereby empowered to serve a notice upon such owner in the form of schedule B to the Principal Act requiring him to destroy such animals. And if, after twenty-eight days from the date of the service of such notice, such owner shall fail to take steps to the satisfaction of the justices before whom any prosecution shall be instituted to comply with the same, he shall on conviction for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds. And the board, whether it direct proceedings to be taken against such owner for the recovery of the said penalty or not, may authorize any person in writing to enter by any gate or ordinary opening upon the said land, and to use all such lawful means as he may deem necessary for taking and destroying such animals and removing the carcases or any portion thereof. And for that purpose such person may stop up any rabbit burrows or holes, and with the sanction of the board, and after forty-eight hours' notice to the owner, and to adjoining owners (if any) within a distance of two miles he may burn or destroy any brushwood or log fence on such land which shall be found to harbour rabbits, or under which such burrows shall be found to run. Provided always that every person so authorized as aforesaid shall be liable for any damage done by any dog, engine, material, or process whatsoever used by him, or by any person in his employment, unless where such damage is caused by the lawful exercise of any power hereby conferred; provided, also, that the said board shall be liable from and out of the moneys at its disposal to make good any claim or part of any claim for damage not recovered from such person aforesaid.

6. For the purpose of raising a fund within each district for carrying into effect the provisions of this Act to be called the "Noxious Animals Destruction Account," the board shall within thirty days of its first meeting, and thereafter at some meeting to be held in the month of May in each year, and at such other times during the year as may be necessary, of which not less than ten clear days notice shall be given make assessments on stock not exceeding in the annual aggregate three-pence per head of large stock, and one half-penny per sheep on sheep, but no rate shall be levied upon any owner of less than one hundred sheep or ten head of large stock, and shall make assessments on unstocked runs within its district not exceeding in the annual aggregate twice the amount of rent payable for such runs to the Crown.

7. From the funds standing to the credit of the "Noxious Animals Destruction Account," the treasurer shall pay by cheques signed by himself and the chairman of the board, or some other member specially authorized in that behalf, the amounts certified to be due for the destruction of noxious animals, by bonus or otherwise, as hereinbefore provided, and any other expenses lawfully incurred by the board in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

8. Any person who shall introduce or attempt to introduce, or assist, or be concerned in introducing any live wild rabbits into this colony, or who shall have any live wild rabbits in his possession or charge, or shall liberate any rabbits in any part of the colony, shall, on conviction, for every such offence be imprisoned for any term not exceeding six months, or shall, in the discretion of the Bench, forfeit and pay any sum not less than £10, and not more than one hundred pounds. And every person who shall have in his possession or charge any tame rabbits shall keep the same so as to effectually prevent their escape, under a penalty not exceeding ten pounds for every failure or neglect.

9. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, the Minister aforesaid, upon a representation being made to him in writing by five or more owners liable to be assessed under this Act to the effect that a certain owner therein named is neglecting to destroy the noxious animals on his land, and that the board for the district in which such land is situated has failed to take any steps to promote the destruction of such animals may direct the inspector for the district to serve the defaulting owner with a notice in the form of schedule B to the Principal Act, and if after the expiry of twenty-eight days from the date of the service of such notice the said owner shall fail or neglect to comply with the same he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds, and for any subsequent neglect as aforesaid he shall be liable to a like penalty. Provided that no two convictions shall take place within a period of two months, and provided also that it shall be held that an owner is not neglecting to destroy the noxious animals aforesaid, on proof being adduced that he has expended in the destruction of such animals during the then preceding twelve months a sum of money equal to twice the amount at which he has been rated, or might have been rated under this Act during the current year, or on proof that being the owner of any unstocked country, he has expended in like manner during the preceding twelve months a sum equal to twice the amount of rent payable annually to the Crown for such country.

10. Any person destroying noxious animals in any adjoining colony, and obtaining or attempting to obtain payment for scalps, or as bonuses for the same under this Act, shall on conviction for any such offence, be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor, or in the discretion of the Bench be liable to a penalty not exceeding one hundred pounds, with or without imprisonment not exceeding six months.

11. Trustees of all commons and of public reserves shall for the purposes of the Principal Act, and of this Act, be considered to be the owners of the stock grazing, by the authority of such trustees, upon such commons and reserves, and to be the owners of the land comprised within such commons and reserves.

12. Any person desirous of keeping in his possession hares or animals other than rabbits, which by reason of their excessive increase may inflict serious loss and damage upon owners or the occupiers of gardens, orchards, cropped or any cultivated lands, and to which the provisions of this and the principal Act shall, by reason of such damage and loss, be hereafter applied, shall make application to the Governor for permission to do so. And the Governor may grant such permission, and make such regulations in terms of the thirtieth clause of the Principal Act as may be necessary for limiting and enclosing land on which such person shall desire to keep such hares or other animals, and for the means by which such hares and other animals shall be prevented from escaping from their enclosures. And all hares and such other animals so securely enclosed shall be exempt from this Act.

SCHEDULE.

Scale of votes at Elections of Directors.

Owners of not less than 10 and not exceeding 500 head of large stock, or superintendents of not less than 1000, but not exceeding 2000 head of large stock, one vote. Owners of more than 500 and not exceeding 2000 head of large stock, or the superintendents of more than 2000, and not exceeding 3000 head of large stock, two votes. Owners of more than 2000 and not exceeding 5000 head of large stock, or the superintendents of more than 3000, and not exceeding 5000 head of large stock, three votes. Owners or superintendents of more than 5000, four votes.

TRIPARTITE COLLAPSIBLE BOAT.—Mr. Berthon's tripartite collapsible boat (says the Pall Mall Gazette) is likely to remove one difficulty to which ships in action have often been subject. Their boats got smashed, and when the enemy struck they were unable to send an officer on board. Many prizes thus escaped. After the engagement between the Blanche and Pique, famous in poetry and in picture, the Pique was taken possession of by Mr. (afterwards Sir David) Milne and a party of ten men, who swam to her. More recently it has been found that the concussion from the firing of very large guns is itself apt to stave the boats. Mr. Berthon's newest boat is said to avoid all these dangers. It can be taken to pieces, folded up, and put away in a safe place until wanted. It has lately been tried on board the Inflexible, and found to answer perfectly well, whether as luggage on board or as a boat in the water. As the Inflexible is calculated to be so likely as not to turn over in the event of her being (in official language) "riddled and gutted," it is doubly desirable that she should be provided with boats themselves safe from being "riddled."

The Potosi (s.), left Plymouth on December 31, with a full cargo, 452 passengers, and the usual mails for Australia.

Messrs. O. R. Stevens and Co. are in receipt of a cablegram from their Hongkong firm conveying the information that the s.s. Cassandra leaves that port for Singapore, Port Darwin, Queensland ports, Sydney and Melbourne, on 16th January. The Nelson (s.) left Batavia for the colonies on Saturday, December 31, en route from Hongkong.

The barque William Manson left the Mauritius with fresh S. to S.E. winds, which gradually veered round to east and north, with fine weather. The date of her departure was November 29, and she appears to have made a good passage. On December 11 she passed between Amsterdam and St. Paul's, with unsettled weather and frequent gales from north to south, which prevailed to the 24rd, on the meridian of Cape Leuwin, when a steady westerly breeze set in for a day or so, followed by squally and wet weather to Bass' Straits; King's Island was passed at 4 a.m. on January 1st. Wilson's Promontory at 4 p.m. on the same day, and Gabo Island at noon on the 2nd. There was a strong W.S.W. gale through the Straits, which moderated at Cape Howe. Sydney Heads were entered at 4 p.m. on the 3rd, after a passage of 35 days.

The Escort left Java on December 3rd. The south-east trades were soon taken up after departure, and they carried the vessel to 24 South. From thence to Cape Wickham moderate S.W. winds were experienced, and from Cape Wickham to arrival fresh S.W. winds. The Escort entered the Heads at 4 p.m. on the 3rd, and came to anchor in Neutral Bay.

The British Yeoman was also amongst the English arrivals yesterday, having left London on September 29. She met with favourable winds to the Cape de Verde Islands, which were passed on the inside the 14th day out. Here northerly winds ran them into the N.E. trades, which were lost again in 10° N.; the Equator was crossed on October 29th, in 29° west, with fair weather; in 20° north the south east trades were caught, and carried to 15° S.; from thence to the Cape of Good Hope light variable winds; the Equator, it may be pointed out, was crossed on the 30th day out, and the Cape was also passed 30 days afterwards in 40° S. The easting was run down between the parallels of 39° and 40°, with strong and favourable winds and occasional gales. King' Island was passed on the night of the 31st, the vessel being driven along by a very heavy south-west gale of wind. They were off Wilson's Promontory on the following morning, and Cape Howe on the morning of the 2nd. The British Yeoman appears to have made a good run along the coast to arrival on the 3rd, the wind following aft all the way to Jervis Bay, when it came from S.S.E., accompanied by a little rain.

The Orchomene left Liverpool on September 13, and passed the Tuskar two days afterwards. There were winds of a light and variable kind at the outset, which prevailed almost continually to the Equator, no N.E. trades being met with. The line was crossed on October 22 in long. 27·30 E.; in 3° N. the S.E. trades were caught, and were only moderate, accompanying the ship to lat. 20°. Passed Trinidad on November 1, and only light winds carried the vessel to the Cape, which was passed on November 24, in lat. 44·20 S. The easting was run down between 44° and 45° south, with northerly and light winds for the most part, excepting certain periods in this stage of the voyage, when gales overtook the vessel. Off Tasmania, on December 27, severe gales commenced, and lasted for two days, commencing from N.E., and veering round to N.W. During this storm, part of the maintopsail yard was carried away, and in consequence of enormous seas prevailing at the time, the vessel shipped large quantities of water. A comparative calm followed this storm, but after a day of light variables another strong gale was encountered from west round to N.E., lasting 14 hours. Subsequently light variable winds set in and accompanied the ship to arrival on the morning of the 3rd. The Orchomene is a new ship, having been built at Liverpool and launched in August last. She was made for Henry Fernie and Sons by Messrs. Potter and Sons, shipbuilders. During the test applied to her occasionally by exceedingly boisterous weather Captain Finlay has cause to be gratified at her behaviour.

The Cynosure left the West India Dock, London, on September 27 at 4 p.m., and Gravesend on the 28th at 6 a.m. Landed the pilot in the Downs at 10 a.m. on the following day, and proceeded down Channel with light easterly winds. The Start Point was passed at 4 p.m. on the 30th with fine easterly winds, which were carried to Madeira on October 6; from thence they had fine N.E. trades to the Cape Verd Islands. Antonio Island was passed on 14th October, and on the 18th the N.E. trades were lost in lat. 10·30 N., long. 25·10 W.; light, variable winds ensued, and the S.E. trades were secured on the 28th, the Equator being crossed on the following day, long. 26·20 W. Fine S.E. trades accompanied the vessel to the Island of Trinidad, which was reached on November 8th. Light variable winds followed till November 15th; thence fine westerly winds from the Island of Tristan d' Acunha to the meridian of the Cape, which was passed in lat. 41 S. on November 27th. Very fine weather ensued to the meridian 96 E., and thence to the meridian of Cape Leuwin, this point being passed on December 22nd. Light variable winds followed until the 27th, in lat. 44·14 S., long. 138 E., when the wind backed to the south-west, and blew with much force. The ship was kept before the wind. Cape Otway was sighted and passed on December 30th, with fine weather, but heavy sea; Curtis Island on the 31st, and Cape Howe on January 1st. Off Jervis Bay, on the evening of the 2nd, and from thence to arrival, there were light S.E. winds, with heavy cross seas, which caused the Cynosure to ship large quantities of water.

MOVEMENTS OF H.M. SHIPS.

It is stated officially that as soon as the Nelson arrives, the changes announced some time since with reference to the disposal of some of her Majesty's vessels on this station will be carried into effect. The Emerald was going to New Zealand at the commencement of the present year, but her orders have been countermanded, and she now stops until the arrival of the Nelson. The Cormorant leaves on Thursday, the 12th, for Brisbane, the rest of the squadron remaining here to await commands from Commodore Erskine, as soon as Commodore Wilson has formally transferred his authority and given over command of the station. The Nelson is expected here on the 10th January, and the assignment of plenary powers is expected to take place on the 12th, and the Wolverene ship's company will leave on the 26th of this month by the P. and O. steamer Khedive. It will be gratifying to the friends of the Hon. Edward G. Dawson, of the Miranda, to learn that he has received his promotion as Post Captain, and will be succeeded in the command of the Miranda by Commodore Lawson of the Cormorant. Lieutenant Maxwell, of the Sandfly, takes charge of the Cormorant as acting Commander. Two schooners, the Alacrity and Conflict, will shortly be sold out of the service, whilst the Renard is now being fitted out at Mort's Dock as a surveying vessel, to take the place of the Alacrity in the Fiji survey. The Beagle, Sandfly, and Lark are also undergoing thorough repair in Mort's Dock preparatory to their summer cruise in the islands. It may be stated that the Emerald will shortly be relieved on the station by the Diamond, and the Cormorant by the Espiegle, both the ships for substitution being now on their way from Great Britain.

THE NELSON.

As this fine warship will arrive in the course of a few days, it may not be inopportune to publish the names of her officers. The Nelson is an armour-plated vessel of 7320 tons, having engines of 6640-horse power. She is armed with 12 large guns, apart from cannon of a smaller type, including a battery of six guns, known as the Gatling. Her sister ship is the Northumberland, now on the North American and West India station, and is the largest war vessel that has ever crossed the line. In addition to her commander, Captain Maxwell, there are Commander W. H. Henderson, Lieutenants Francis Powell, Everard E. Maxwell, Thomas C. Fenton (torpedo lieutenant), F. P. Tillard (gunnery lieutenant), Hon. Gerald F. Digby, Maurice W. Portman; Staff-commander J. R. Osborne; Brevet Major, Townley W. Dowding; Henry D. Drake Lieutenant Marine Artillery; Chaplain and Naval Instructor, Rev. W. Law; Staff Surgeon, Thomas H. Knott; paymaster, William H. Bowen; chief engineer, William Giles; sub-lieutenants, Thomas H. Thyne, E. R. Sankey; surgeons, James C. Dow, M.B., Thomas R. Backthorne; assistant paymasters, George E. Miall, Herbert L. Warren (Commodore's secretary), Alexander L. Cabitt (clerk to the secretary elect); engineers, James E. B. Warrington, John Glaysher, B. J. Baxter; gunner, P. Cox; boatswains, C. Pellow, Thomas Chiswell, William Burns; carpenter, James Wilson; midshipmen, C. J. Jones, Hugh L. D. Stapleton, Augustus B. C. Warren, Heathcoat S. Grant, Bertie A. Cator, Walter C. Preston, Herbert J. Smith, W. G. C. Walter, Cuthbert E. Hunter, Thomas W. Stirling, Alexander S. Cleeve, R. Sullivan, C. G. Sclater, A. J. Henniker, Hon. D'Arcy Lambton, Thomas D. S. Sheppard, A. H. Fanshawe, W. W. Ayre, P. D. Garrett, Randolph S. Tollemache; assistant engineers, James C. Edmonds, H. Meadus, Allan H. Slade; clerk, N. H. Greenwood; assistant clerk, Herbert A. Barron. It is pleasing to find upon scanning down the list of young gentlemen who have adopted the navy as their profession that many of them we find are the descendants of men who by brave services in days of yore have left their names indelibly printed on the pages of history; so that the navy is as popular to-day with the descendants of those great and brave men as it was 40 years ago. Major Dowding, whose name appears amongst the officers of the Nelson, will be remembered from his distinguished services in the late Zulu wars, where he received his promotion.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

Tuesday Evening.

The associated stock and sharebrokers met again today. As it was considered that the publication of sales made since the last meeting on the 23rd ultimo would be misleading they were not reported. An abstract of the revenue receipts and expenditure of the colony, in a complete form, appears in a supplement to the Government Gazette to-day. The leading items of revenue have already been published. The past quarter's expenditure amounted to £1,866,767. The disbursements for the year reached £5,896,943. Of this £20,656 was under the head Executive and Legislative; £600,359, Colonial Secretary; £457,174, Treasurer and Secretary for Finance and Trade; £552,302, Public Instruction; £197,548, Administration of Justice; £35,784, Attorney-General; £364,788, Secretary for Lands; £1,636,444, Secretary for Public Works; £419,900, Postmaster-General; £68,243, Secretary for Mines; £6184, re-votes; £976,499, special appropriations; £45,438, schedules; £407,555, payments out of accumulated surplus revenue; other payments, £108,002. The revenue proper for the year as stated was £6,714,327. The credit balance of £2,870,940 was distributed as follows:—Cash: Bank of New South Wales, London account, £861,777; Sydney account, £514,403; special deposits in banks from the public account, £821,822; in hands of receiver, £59,020; total cash balance, £2,257,023; securities in Treasury chest, £613,316. Bank of New South Wales debentures—lunacy trust, £600; total cash and securities, £2,870,940.

A company was registered in Brisbane last week, called the Western Queensland Pastoral Company, having a nominal capital of £350,000, with the object of purchasing Bureeda, Mitchell Downs, Coogan, and Authorite stations, and of acquiring fresh country. The stock, to be handed over to the company in March next, includes 180,000 sheep, 30,000 cattle, and 1000 horses.

At a general meeting of shareholders of the Kiandra Gold-mining Company, Limited, held to-day, the company was declared duly formed, and Messrs. R. Barton, M.L.A., A. H. M'Culloch, M.L.A., J. Broomfield, W. H. Paling, A. Harcourt, and G. Maiden were elected directors, and Messrs. J. C. Taylor and T. Gillespie auditors.

The Import markets to-day were extremely dull. There is nothing remarkable in this, as people are usually slow in settling down to business after the holidays, and as the work of stock-taking occupies the attention of many to the exclusion of operations in the open market. The fact that large stocks will be further supplemented by the arrival to-day of three cargoes from England, valued at over £100,000, is not likely to contribute to the strengthening of values when business does fairly open. The flour trade is extremely quiet, and confined to comparatively few bakers' small parcels at up to £12 15s. for Adelaide and New South Wales, and to £12 for ordinary brands of Victorian. Oilmen's stores and general groceries are without change in values. London pickles were sold at 8s. In liquors, business was done in Hennessy's case at 31s. and 47s., single and three star respectively, very old being placed at 56s. 6d.; a line of Champagne Vineyard was done at agents' quotations. Large sales of Bulldog and Foster's ale, for forward delivery, are advised at up to 10s. 9d. for trade lines. A shipment of Bass' new brew ale was placed at current rates. The metal market is without alteration; a good line of Braby's galvanized iron was quitted at £24. Cement to land, with a view to the saving of storage, has been offered at a price barely maintaining late market rates. For carbonate of soda £12 10s. was paid. A line of Day and Martin's paste blacking was done at 4s.

On the wharfs prime lucerne hay is quoted at £2 10s. to £2 15s. per ton, inferior from 20s. to 40s. per ton. In Sussex-street maize is quoted at 4s. 6d. to 4s. 9d. per bushel; oats, 2s. 6d. to 2s. 9d.; Hunter River onions, from 2s. to 4s. per cwt.; potatoes, from 4s. 6d. to 5s. per cwt.; chaff, £5 per ton; eggs, 1s. to 1s. 2d. per dozen; butter, 7d. to 8d. per lb.

Messrs. Fraser and Co. will offer at auction to-morrow (Wednesday) morning, the Athena's cargo of Mauritius sugar—including brewers' crystals, and all grades from browns to white, a good marketable shipment.

Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin offered a catalogue of wool to-day, comprising 4432 bales, chiefly medium and lower qualities. The better descriptions of fleece are becoming scarce. Although there was a good attendance of buyers, competition was less active. About 2600 bales were quitted publicly and privately at somewhat easier rates. Fair quality of fleece brought 16d. to 17½d.; locks and pieces, 7d. to 13½d.; greasy, average descriptions, 9d. to 11d.; faulty and medium lots, 7½d. to 8½d.; locks, pieces, &c., 5d. to 7½d.; secured fleece, 17d. to 19½d.; pieces, 15d. to 17d.; locks, 10d. to 13d. The principal lots sold were—Fleece, PK over G1, 12 at 16d.; RAA, 23 at 15½d.; ⌒ over K, 10 at 16½d.; WJ over CF, 61 at 14d.; RR over C, 18 at 14d.; scoured, RS over Belalie, 70 at 19½d., 65 pieces at 17d.; D&Co. over Deepwater, 111 from 11d. to 17½d.; greasy, JHT, 19 at 10d.; QS, 33 at 10½d.; RS in block, 67 at 11d.; AJ over Cadow, 88 at 10½d.; NC over J in diamond, 41 at 10½d. A catalogue of sheepskins was sold at from 2d. to 7½d. per lb.

At the Homebush fat stock sales to-day, 438 head of of cattle were yarded. There was little alteration in prices, best beef selling at 22s. per 100lb. The following were sold:—41 bullocks (Adams), £5 6s. 5d.; 33 bullocks (Badgery), £6 13s. 1d.; 13 cows (Badgery), £4 3s. 9d.; 299 cows (Swift's), £7 15s. 4d.; 56 bullocks (Golding), £4 17s.; 15 cows (Golding), £4 7s 6d. 5860 sheep were penned, of which 1500 were passed. The market was firmer. The following lots were sold:—199 wethers (Glasson), 11s. 3d.; 2000 wethers (Ricketson), 9s. 1d. to 10s. 11d.; 180 wethers (Gilchrist, Watt), 9s. 6d.; 500 wethers (Gibson), 8s. 10d.; 1258 wethers (Gordon and Campbell), 8s. 10d.; 235 ewes (Gordon and Campbell), 6s. 7d. to 7s. 2d.

A fair amount of business was done to-day at the leather sales. The market was rather easy for all descriptions. Messrs. Mort and Co., F. L. Barker, and Maiden, Hill, and Clark report sales with ranges of value as follows:—Kip, 12d. to 16d.; sole, 8d. to 9½d.; tweed, 17d. to 22½d.; yearling, 19d. to 24d.; calf, 19d. to 24d.; harness, 10½d. to 13d.; kangaroo, 20d. to 26d.; bag, 8s. to 12s.; bridle, 8s. to 12s.; basils, 4s. 4d. to 12s. 6d.

The arrivals to-day include the Cynosure and British Yeoman from London, and Orchomene from Liverpool, with general cargoes valued at £25,000, £56,200, and £22,000 respectively; the Kate Harding from Probligo, and Escort from Java, with sugar; and the William Manson, from Mauritius, also with sugar.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1882.

The citizens of Adelaide have lately been polled on the question as to whether the main street of the city should be driven straight through the principal square. The question is one of interest to all surveyors who are called upon to lay out townships, as well as to all who study the ornamentation of cities and the allocation of reserves. Colonel Light, who laid out the city of Adelaide, was rightly bent upon having a certain quantity of open space reserved. In South Adelaide he had a nearly square plateau to deal with. He made the two principal streets at right angles to each other a chain and a-half wide, and he made the other parallel streets alternately wide and narrow. He girdled the whole city with a broad belt of park lands, and in addition laid out five squares, one in the very centre of the city, and the others in the centre of the four quarters. This was very symmetrical, but the plan has this inconvenience, that each square is at the intersection of four principal streets. The consequence is that the continuity of these streets is broken, and vehicles have to make a detour of half the square to get into the line again. In the case of Victoria-square, which is in the centre of the city, the blockade has been found the more inconvenient because the Glenelg railway, which runs up the principal street, has to stop at the southern side of the square. The whole question has been fully discussed by the citizens on its practical as well as on its æsthetic side, and the result is that an immense majority has decided to reverse the decision of Colonel Light. That gentleman's idea was probably to break the monotony of the street by a peep of intersecting foliage, and so give a much needed relief to the eye wearied by the glare of dust, of stone pavements, and of white houses. But the inconvenience of blocking the traffic of great thoroughfares is too serious to be encountered, and the price is too great to pay for the luxury. Moreover, utility does not require the entire sacrifice of beauty, for where the street is wide it is possible to run a roadway through the square, and yet leave a large margin for cultivation on either side. A street which is merely a passage for through traffic, and which has no side traffic, need not be very wide, and therefore it is quite possible to combine a central square with central streets, by cutting it pratically into four squares, each of which will overlap the street alignment. The usual plan of laying out city squares is to pack them away between parallel streets. This has the advantage of giving a pleasant outlook to all the houses round the quadrangle, and the continuity of the street is in no way broken; but then the foliage of such squares is not visible from any distance. There are advantages and disadvantages attendant on either plan, and the preference given to either must depend a good deal upon attendant circumstances. Colonel Light's idea was that the central square should be surrounded by the great public buildings, and several acres were reserved for this purpose. The idea has been partly carried out, and the Government offices, the Supreme Court, the Post Office, and the Town Hall, thus occupy central positions close to the square. This arrangement is all in favour of architectural effect, a thing which we have terribly neglected in Sydney, where we have many fine buildings in positions where they can scarcely be seen. But for practical business purposes it is somewhat inconvenient to separate too widely from each other important centres of business. If we watch the natural growth of a city, we shall observe a tendency in business establishments to group themselves together, regardless of any other consideration than that of convenience. In this way the intentions of surveyors who have planned cities have often been set at naught. Business refuses to take the line indicated. We see a remarkable illustration of this in Melbourne, where palatial warehouses that would do honour to any frontages are inconveniently crowded together in Flinders-lane, a narrow passage which was only intended for back entrances. In the same way in Adelaide, although Colonel Light had made his alternate streets broader than the others, intending them for the principal streets, the chief shops settled themselves in two of the narrower streets, thus completely frustrating the intention of the original surveyor. It seems to be almost impossible to place a city and say this shall be the principal centre for business—those shall be the fashionable streets, and these shall be back lanes. Considerations which never occurred to the mind of the artist who sees in his mind's eye the city of the future, and who lays down a plan that he means to be realized, come in to determine the conduct of those by whose labours the city is really built up. Just as water takes its own course, and will not always keep to the channels carved out for it, so do the activity of business and reasons of expediency spring up to alter a design that was planned mainly with an eye to beauty. It is in this way that the citizens of Adelaide have resolved to cut through their principal square, and to make a bordered gravel walk give place to a macadamised road. The air space will not be diminished, nor indeed need the street surface be increased, because more than what the new street will require might be easily recovered by extending the outer margin of the square, or making a broad boulevard round it. A road that has traffic only on one side need not be so broad as one that has traffic on both sides. The interesting question is whether the appearance of the city will be in any way spoiled by the innovation on Colonel Light's idea, and whether what is gained will more than compensate for what is lost. On this point the citizens of Adelaide will better be able to form an opinion when the change has been effected, and their experience will furnish a useful lesson to their neighbours. One thing is quite certain, and that is that in all these colonies we cannot labour too zealously to have our cities beautiful, and to turn every natural advantage to the best account. A beautiful city is a thing for the enjoyment of rich and poor alike; it is a perpetual feast for the eye, and one of the best schools for educating the public taste; and for this reason the position and designing of public parks and promenades deserve the best care that can be given to them. In this colony there has been a great and a healthy movement lately to increase the number of parks and squares. The Government has been more pressed on the former point than on the latter; but, as we have frequently pointed out, Sydney is rather deficient in squares, and yet it is much more easy to find small patches of ground still not built upon that may be kept as ornamental spaces than it is to find enough for little parks. In what we are doing, however, it will be desirable to see not only that we secure land enough, and in the right places, but that we so plan them as not to impede great lines of traffic, and avoid creating an antagonism between utility and beauty.

The accession of M. Gambetta to power in France threw a more favourable light upon the prospects of the commercial treaty negotiations between that country and Great Britain. It appears from the latest news that those negotiations have failed. Some disappointment will be caused by this failure, because it will alter the relations between the two countries, and may diminish the friendly feeling that has prevailed between the two peoples. The fact that a special agreement as to trade between England and France had existed for years, and that it has been terminated without any new agreement being set up in its place, can hardly escape producing a certain moral shock over and above the legal or technical change. The understanding of mutual interest by which the commercial intercourse of the two nations was governed has been broken up, and each pursues a policy dictated by a regard to its own interests only. The new attitude thus assumed is certainly less adapted to promote friendly feeling than the old one; and so far the collapse of the negotiations is a cause for regret. But it may be doubted whether much disappointment will be felt in England on other grounds. To a certain extent the old treaty placed a limit upon the action of Great Britain towards other countries, and by getting rid of that limit what is lost by England in France by the loss of a commercial treaty may be made up elsewhere by means of fiscal changes to which that treaty was opposed. England will for instance be freer now than before to reduce the duties on the stronger classes of wines, and thereto, the so of that course would probably open the markets of Spain to various articles of British manufacture which that people there would be very glad to get, but which are now shut out. There is no doubt that French interests profited greatly by the development of trade with England which the Cobden Treaty produced; and although British interests also gained, the relative importance of the treaty to British trade was never so great as its relative importance to the trade of France. France stands to lose more by the interruption of the trade across the Channel than England does; and it is not surprising that there should be a strong feeling in England against entering into any new treaty that would interfere with British freedom, and at the same time place British trade on inferior terms. The French negotiators have throughout endeavoured to drive a hard bargain, as if they held the belief that they were in a position to dictate terms. How greatly they have mistaken the situation, the result shows. Of course, it is not for the British Government to say what duties of Customs should be levied in France. But it is quite open to the British Government to say to that of France, "If you are bent upon establishing a policy of protection, do so independently; we would rather have no commercial treaty than become an assenting party to a tariff that is intended to injure British interests."

The break up of the Anglo-French commercial agreement will help to prove the inexpediency of depending much upon such agreements in a country like England, whose true policy is to seek, without restriction or impediment, for markets in all parts of the world. We do not say that it was a mistake to enter into this treaty in the first instance. Perhaps without it even Napoleon III., with all his influence, would have been unable to procure that abatement of French protectionism, which led to so great and beneficial an increase of trade. The relaxation of the British tariff might have been carried without a treaty, but it is doubtful whether so much could have been accomplished in France. And amongst the consequences of the treaty, even in France, may be reckoned, not only the enlargement of trade, but the strengthening of the free-trade party, although that party has not yet strength enough to do what was done years ago by the Emperor's will. But it is one thing for a country like England to be a party to a commercial treaty providing, however imperfectly, for an enlargement of trade; and it is another to be a party to a treaty that would tend to diminish it. An immense trade sprang up through the removal of restrictions; and that was worth making a treaty for. But if, now that the trade is so great, restrictions are to be re-imposed upon it, in the interest of France, that is clearly a departure from the policy of the former treaty, and as this object can be effected without a treaty, the reason why England should enter into a treaty is not evident. The benefit gained by France under the late treaty was the result of creating a freer trade. The same benefit would have been gained if the same policy had been followed on both sides without any treaty at all. But the fact that a treaty was the means of promoting French interests by the enlargement of French trade seems to have suggested the idea that French interests could be promoted by another treaty, placing the trade between the two countries under closer restrictions. Had the operation of the treaty thoroughly converted the French people to free trade, this mistake would not have been made; but it is not for England, where free trade is the national policy, to follow France in making it.

The policy of buying free intercourse with other countries by making concessions in their favour cannot be carried beyond a certain point. If England, for instance, entered upon such a process with the United States, she would exhaust her power of making concessions before the American markets were opened to any considerable extent. When such treaties expire it is in the power of the Protectionist Government to say—"We are about to increase our duties; what do you offer in order to be made exempt?" But the free-trade Government has little or nothing to offer. It has cut down its tariff to the lowest point. It is not in a position to buy concessions; its only straightforward course is to preserve its own freedom of action, and instead of relying upon a trade with special countries that may have to be purchased for more than it would be worth, to make the most of its own peculiar powers and advantages, and trust to them to find openings for its trade under whatever conditions may be found prevailing throughout the world.

The testimony of a British sailor of the experience and status of Rear-Admiral Wilson to the beneficial results of the introduction of temperance principles into the navy is a valuable one. There are none to whom the grogshop offers stronger temptations than to "Jack ashore," and there are none to whom the results of a drinking bout are more disastrous. In all large seaports there are scores, often hundreds, of men who make a vile living by preying upon seamen of all classes; and by naval authorities it is asserted that a very large proportion of the desertions from the navy, which are productive of such trouble and expense whenever a ship of war touches at a port, are the result of "sprees" and the machinations of crimps, and not of deliberate intent to abscond. The highest officials in the British naval service have said that the sober men in a man-of-war's crew are the best behaved, the healthiest, and the most reliable in times of emergency; and to this must be added the testimony of Commodore Wilson, that "there are few institutions in existence which have rendered such valuable service to the seamen of the British navy as the organization of Good Templars," and that his "warmest sympathies were with those who took the sailor by the hand and endeavoured to shield and protect him from the temptations of the grog-shop." We cannot expect to have immaculate seamen, but any organization which will tend to increase the self-respect and improve the conduct of the men in our navy will have the effect of reducing the "black list," and diminishing the expense of controlling disorderly men, and will therefore deserve well of the community.

The opening of two additional miles of tramway last week, for the convenience of the populous and growing suburb of Marrickville, and the celebration of that event by a dinner, gave Mr. Lackey an opportunity to discuss the whole question of tramway construction and management. He says the need for tramways was forced upon his attention some years ago by the rapid growth of the suburbs, and that he substituted them for a system of suburban railways, as first intended, because they are cheaper, and can be constructed in very much less time. If Mr. Lackey had been authorized to make those suburban railways at the time to which he refers, they could have been completed to every principal suburb before the first shovelful of metal was picked up for the Marrickville tramway. He is himself convinced even now that tramways are only pioneers for railways, for he says, "These lines pave the way for the population that will follow their construction, and make the ordinary railway an absolute necessity." Every holiday proves that suburban railways are an absolute necessity already, and every day that is lost before they are constructed will add to their final cost, as it adds to the inconvenience the public have to endure. The crowding on New Year's Day, for instance, was almost unprecedented, and every lumbering old vehicle which had been driven off the roads had to be called into requisition on Monday, if it would only hold together, in order to carry passengers whom the trams could not accommodate. As to the motive power used on the lines, Mr. Lackey is too well satisfied. The principle of the American motors may be the best; but the mechanism itself is too noisy; it wants a few lessons in cleanliness, and the wasted fuel it emits into the atmosphere in the form of smoke is a barbarism modern science ought not to permit. The public are grateful for suburban tramways because they cannot get railways, and Mr. Lackey is quite right in saying this means of transit will prove the necessity of a better. That ought not to have needed proving to anybody who knows the metropolitan area contains about a quarter of a million people; and if the Government were blind they were wilfully blind. Mr. Lackey's eyes seem now to be open, and if those of his colleagues are open also, next session may fill up the one gap in the liberal railway policy of the last two sessions by giving the capital and its suburbs proper means of communication.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Will the Pope leave Rome and settle somewhere outside the King of Italy's dominions is still one of the foremost questions engaging the attention of Europe at the present time. We are told this morning by one of our cablegrams that the Papal Nuncio at the Court of Vienna has described a plan which would give to the Pope a territorial see. What that plan is we are not told. Rumours which have prevailed of late have given Salzburg as the place at which Leo XIII. is likely to settle. To whatever place the Pope may migrate, King Humbert has declared that his Government will repudiate any interference with the internal affairs of Italy. Another of this morning's messages states that German influence is taking the place of British influence at the Porte. A statement of this kind, however, requires to be received with some amount of reserve. Seven Irish ladies have been arrested for inciting the people to resist the Government in its efforts to restore order in Ireland. It is evident that Miss Anna Parnell's defiance does not count for much with the police authorities. The cases submitted to the Land Court number 70,000. In sixty per cent. of the cases which have been decided, appeals against the decisions of the courts have been entered. Another terrible catastrophe is reported, through the floor of a building giving way during a festival. The occurrence was at Shanesville, Ohio. A hundred persons were injured, and twelve were killed.

We learn from the Electric Telegraph Department that communication by the Amoy and Shanghai cable, which had been interrupted, has now been restored.

A reduction in the rates for telegraphic messages between Sydney and Tasmania has been made, the new tariff taking effect from the 1st instant. Formerly the charges were 7s. for ten words, and 8d. for each additional word. The charge are now 4s. for ten words, and 4d. for each additional word.

Mr. John Williamson, a candidate for the vacancy in the Legislative Assembly caused by the appointment of the Hon. John Sutherland to the Legislative Council and his resignation as member for the district of Redfern, addressed about 200 electors at the Town Hall, Redfern, last evening. The Mayor of Redfern occupied the chair, and expressed his intention of supporting the candidate, in whose favour a resolution was unanimously carried. The meeting was a very orderly one.

We stated in our issue of Monday that up to that time all but one of the gentlemen to whom the positions of stipendiary magistrates had been offered had accepted the appointments. Since that time Mr. A. C. Fraser, Clerk of the Peace, has declined the appointment offered him, and therefore there is still one of the positions to be filled.

The Government intend to enforce the provisions of the new Licensing Act against those of the publicans who since the last day of 1881 have kept their houses open for the sale of liquor after the hour specified in the Act. Prosecutions will be commenced without delay in some of the cases, and the result will determine the course to be taken with regard to the remainder. Up to the present time the Act has been in many cases quite disregarded, so far as closing at 11 o'clock at night is concerned, the majority of the licensed victuallers acting in this respect upon the advice tendered by the Licensed Victuallers Association; but the breaches of the clause providing for the prohibition of the liquor traffic on Sundays were not numerous or glaring during Sunday last, most of the houses having strictly complied with the law. There have been cases where houses have been opened prior to 6 o'clock in the morning, contrary to the Act, and the landlords of these we believe, together with other offenders, will be brought before the Court. Doubt has been felt in some quarters as to whether cases under the new Act could be brought before the Bench as at present constituted, the opinion being held that only the magistrates who are to be appointed under the Metropolitan Magistrates Act, and who are to act as magistrates of the Licensing Court, could deal with such cases; but this point was so far settled at the Central Police Court yesterday, that a person who had been locked up for refusing to pay for liquor he had obtained in a public house was brought before the acting Police Magistrate and dealt with, the case being remanded till to-day. It is the intention of the licensed victuallers, or at least a number of them, to keep open until midnight on week night until a case is decided, and then to abide by the result. If a case is brought against one of their number it will be defended, for which purpose Mr. Salomons has been specially retained. A meeting of the Licensed Victuallers' Association will be held this evening, when the present state of affairs with regard to the new Act will again receive consideration.

The collieries in the Newcastle district commenced working yesterday on the increased selling price of 10s. per ton; and it is understood that the miners are henceforth to be paid the increased hewing price.

With reference to a paragraph in the Herald of yesterday, copied from the Melbourne Argus, we are informed that the only person empowered by law to grant an exemption certificate is the Colonial Treasurer, or any person authorized by him—(sec. 9). The Treasurer has appointed the Collector of Customs only, so far, and the only certificate issued is in the following form, which certainly does not contain the objectionable matter quoted by the Argus:—"Whereas ——— of ——— in the colony of New South Wales, being a Chinese, and a description of whom is hereunder stated, has proved to the satisfaction of the Colonial Treasurer that he was on the 6th day of December, 1881, a bona-fide resident of this colony, and that he desires to be absent therefrom for a temporary purpose only; these are therefore to certify that the said ——— is exempt from the provisions of 'The Influx of Chinese Restriction Act of 1881,' for the period of ——— months from this date. ——— Collector of Customs." Here follows the description.

It is hoped that the new year will see a speedy commencement made of the Coogee Bay tramway extension from Randwick. The enormous crowds that now flock to this popular seaside resort are alone sufficient to set at rest any doubts as to the remunerative traffic that may be relied on. The inconvenience of the break in the journey at Randwick no doubt deters many in Sydney from visiting the bay, and risking either a tedious and dusty walk or a crush in an over-crowded waggonette, a seat in which can only be got after a scramble. It is now some two months since the Minister of Public Works declined to see a deputation of local residents on this subject, on the ground that the extension was going to be proceeded with at once. No sign of progress has however been vouchsafed to the public, and no tenders have been called for. The department would confer a great boon on residents in Sydney, as well as those in the locality, by expediting as much as possible this short tramway extension.

There is no fresh case of smallpox. The Board of Health report for yesterday states:—"The following patients were visited by the Government medical staff on the 2nd instant, and are reported as progressing favourably:—Henry J. Woon and Mrs. Burke, Pyrmont; Mrs. Turner, Grose-street, Camperdown; Mr. Ephraim, 93, Abercrombie-street; Henry Horsey, 145, Liverpool-street; and Albert Sinclair, 58, Duke-street, Woolloomooloo. The houses of Mr. Palmer, 8, Prince of Wales-terrace, Pyrmont; Mrs. Smith, 331, Sussex street; and Mr. Kitchen, 83, Campbell street, were visited, and the inmates found to be in good health. The house of Mrs. Russell, of 290, Sussex-street, was released from quarantine this afternoon. Mr. Ephraim, of 93, Abercrombie street, was removed to the Coast Hospital this day, Mrs. Ephraim being removed at the same time to the Sanatorium. The Medical Superintendent of the Coast Hospital and Sanatorium reports that Richard Ephraim passed a good night, is rational, takes nourishment, and sleeps well. Clara Corderoy passed a fair night and is improving; Miss Henry is progressing favourably, and is now out of danger; Albert Corderoy is convalescent. All other patients are up and about, and are regaining their usual health rapidly. The inmates of the Sanatorium are in excellent health and happy. With the view of promoting the comfort and happiness of those about him, the Medical Superintendent at Little Bay arranged an evening's entertainment at the Sanatorium again last night, consisting of music, recitations, readings, &c. Most of the inmates took part in it, and everything went off in a highly enjoyable and satisfactory manner."

Some most disgraceful scenes were enacted on Monday at Manly Beach, where there was a large number of larrikins. Until 3 o'clock in the afternoon there was not much to find fault with, but soon after that hour a disturbance arose in the pavilion necessitating the intervention of the police. It appeared that a man named Thomas Brown was dancing with a woman, and that another man jostled against them. This led to a fight between Brown and another, and the police stepped in and arrested the former. A crowd gathered round the police, and endeavoured to prevent them from taking their prisoner to the lockup, but were unsuccessful. The crowd, however, followed the police and threw stones at them. When the prisoner had been placed in the police-station, the constables returned to arrest some of those who had been observed throwing stones. Whenever a man was taken into custody a large number of his companions showered stones upon the police. The result of so much stone-throwing was that the pavilion was considerably damaged, and a wound of a serious nature was inflicted upon the face of a woman who happened to be close to a policeman. The constables, assisted by a number of residents of Manly, succeeded in making a number of arrests, and the offenders were brought before the Water Police Court yesterday. Nearly all the defendants were charged with riotous behaviour or insulting constables whilst in the execution of their duty, and pleaded not guilty. The charges were, however, in every case sustained. The presiding magistrate said that the Bench were determined to put a stop to such conduct as had been described. It was absolutely outrageous, and they were determined to do what they could to prevent persons indulging in such brutalising pastime. Fines, amounting in the aggregate to £6, were imposed upon Thomas Grinly for riotous behaviour and for assaulting constables Skinner and Leplaw. William Manning was ordered to pay two fines, amounting to £1, for riotous behaviour and assaulting Constable Skinner. John Kirby, for assaulting Constable Thompson, was fined £5. John Riley, for throwing stones, was fined 10s. A similar penalty was inflicted upon Thomas Brown and Frederick Simpson for riotous behaviour. Charles Davis, for riotous behaviour and assaulting Constable Minogue, was fined £1. Clara Solomon, for being drunk and disorderly in the pavilion at Manly, was fined 10s., and for using obscene language a further penalty of 20s. was imposed. John O'Neil was charged with throwing stones, but as he appeared to bear a better character than some of the other offenders, he was only fined 20s. A fine of 40s. was imposed on a man for being drunk and disorderly on the Corso, at Manly.

A correspondent offers a suggestion with regard to the Junior Public Examinations. In the English section, he thinks, the candidates should be required to write an original essay either on some abstract topic or on some subject of current interest, instead of being expected to commit several hundred lines of "Paradise Lost" to memory. Our correspondent also complains that persons of mature age are allowed to compete among the juniors.

A patient in the Sydney Infirmary draws attention to two grievances, from which he, in common with others, has suffered within the past few days—1st, the reprehensible practice indulged in by some persons of throwing orange-peel on the street pavement, to the imminent danger of every passer-by; in fact, he owes his presence in the Infirmary to stepping on a piece of orange-peel. The second complaint relates to the alleged inhumanity of a constable, who, the writer states, treated him, while in a crippled state, as if he had been a refractory burglar, by kneeling on his chest, screwing his wrists about, stamping on his wounded foot, and threatening him with the indignity of handcuffs.

The first meeting of the Board of directors of the Sydney Hospital was held yesterday afternoon in the institution, Hon. Dr. Renwick in the chair. There was a large attendance. As the new rules were not prepared, it was resolved that the institution should continue to be governed by the old rules until the former are framed and adopted. The monthly accounts, amounting to £1388 1s. 10d., were ordered to be paid, as were also several other accounts for the permanent structure; and the tenders for supplies were relegated to a sub-committee for their report. Applications for the vacancies in the medical staff were ordered to be sent to the honorary medical staff for their report, and a letter of complaint against one of the medical officers was referred to that officer for his report. Some discussion in regard to the new bylaws took place, and it was resolved to have them printed and circulated amongst the members of the board before the special meeting was called to consider them.

The ordinary meeting of the Presbytery of Sydney was held yesterday, the Moderator (Rev. H. Macready) presiding. The business transacted was of a very light character. The Rev. Dr. White and the Rev. Mr. M'Innes were appointed assessors to the Paddington session. The report of the committee on the nomination of students was received, and the committee re-appointed. Some discussion took place in reference to carrying into effect a motion adopted some time ago on the subject of giving religious instruction in Public schools. It was decided to appoint the Revs. Paterson and M'Innes, Mr. Brown, the Moderator, and the clerk (the Rev. J. Auld), a committee to draw up a scheme, and report to the Presbytery.

The second of the series of meetings for united prayer in connection with the Evangelical Alliance was held last night, in the Temperance Hall, Pitt-street, and was well attended. The Rev. Mr. Macready occupied the chair, and after a suitable opening service, delivered an address on the subject appointed for the evening, "Confession and self-abasement," after which several gentlemen engaged in prayer. An address was delivered by Mr. G. Lewis, and was followed by prayers. The Rev. Dr. W. M. White, hon. secretary, announced that this evening the Rev. Dr. Kelynack will preside, and that the layman's address will be delivered by the Hon. W. J. Foster, the subject being "Prayer and Supplication for the Church Universal: for every operation and gift of the Holy Spirit to render the Churches in particular, and the Church universal faithful and prosperous, and that God's people may be wholly consecrated to Him; for the gift of men full of faith, and of the Holy Ghost; for the gifts of knowledge, of utterance, of faith, of power, and of a sound mind; for holy pastors, able teachers, mighty evangelists, zealous helpers in all branches of the Lord's service; for the better observance of the Christian Sabbath; for the promotion of temperance, and for deliverance to the persecuted, relief to the suffering, fruit to the toiling, and glorious days of triumph and godly union to all. Isaiah xliv. 1—9; John vii. 37—43; Ephes. i. 3—23; John xvi., 1—15; 1 Cor. xii., 12—31; Rom. xii."

The Protection and Political Reform League met at the Temperance Hall last evening, vice-president W. Richardson in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The secretary, Mr. R. C. Luscombe, reported the various efforts made during the past fortnight to advance the interest of the League by long advertisements in the daily papers, and interviews with manufacturers and leading firms favourable to the protection cause. Twelve names were then handed in—all of them men at the heads of establishments—as new members, whom on being proposed and seconded were duly elected. All had subscribed to the funds sum of £1 each. The position of parties in the forthcoming elections was fully discussed, and the steps decided on by the League will, if necessary, call the whole of the members together at a special meeting early. The Council determined to continue to educate the public mind in all particulars relating to Protectionist principles, and the efforts necessary to prevent the further sale of the public lands, by constantly inserting explanatory advertisements in the papers. The efforts of the English Ambassadors having failed in inducing the French Government to alter their tariff in favour of foreign as against their own manufactures was considered by the League a Protectionist victory. The meeting then adjourned.

The boat that was capsized on Sunday night, off Dobroyde Point, near where Lieutenant Gowlland was drowned, and containing three young men, one of whom did not succeed in reaching shore, was picked up by B. Skinner and Sons, off the Old Man's Hat, in the early part of the next morning, and towed in to Manly, where it now is in a damaged condition. The police have, up to the present, been unable to recover the body of young Mr. Hurley.

A buggy accident happened on Monday to a young man, 30 years of age, named Isaac Sant. The horse bolted; and Mr. Sant, in jumping out of the buggy, sustained a very bad compound dislocation of the left ankle. He was brought to the Infirmary and admitted, and it is feared that the foot will have to be amputated.

A girl, named Alice Edwards, 16 years of age, residing at Randwick, fell down at Coogee on Monday, and broke her arm. She was attended to at the Infirmary.

A lad named William Morrison, 16 years of age, residing at Thomas-street, Redfern, whilst at work at the Prince Alfred Hospital, yesterday, fell from the building a distance of about 20 feet, and fractured his forearm. He was attended to at the Infirmary. A foreigner, named Torquato La Rosa, 48 years of age, was brought into the Infirmary last night from Cook's River, where, it was stated, he had been trodden upon by a horse. He is injured internally, and his case is a very serious one.

About a quarter-past 12 o'clock yesterday morning, a young man named John Hunt Watts, 24 years of age, died suddenly at his lodgings, 73, Forbes-street, Woolloomooloo. A lodger named Reuben Higson, who occupied the same room as the deceased, went out at 12 o'clock to get some medicine, and on his return about a quarter of an hour afterwards he found the deceased lying on the bedroom floor. Higson at once lifted the deceased, who was then apparently dead, into his bed, and sent for a doctor. The deceased is a native of England, and is said to have been for four or five years a medical student at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London. He had lately been employed in the country clearing scrub, and returned to Sydney about three weeks ago, and since then had been drinking heavily. There are some seven or eight slight wounds on the breast of the deceased, which Higson says deceased inflicted on himself with a small chisel on Sunday last. Dr. Mackellar saw the body about two hours after death. The matter has been reported to the Coroner.

The correspondent of the Bay of Plenty Times states that some distance up Otago Gorge, near Opotiki, on a portion of the estate of Mr. Thomas Black, an enormous puketea tree, probably many hundred years old, has been blown down, disclosing the astounding fact that the whole of the hollow interior, extending from the roots to the first fork, about 45 feet, had been filled with human bodies. Since it fell these had burst out at the butt of the tree in the form of a confused heap of skeletons. A more extraordinary sight than this monarch of the forest lying prone and discharging a perfect hecatomb of human skeletons can scarcely be conceived. Some are nearly perfect, while others are mixed up in a chaotic mass of heads, hands, feet, arms, and legs indiscriminately. All the Maoris here seem to have been unaware of this natural charnel-house, and declare that it must have happened long before their or their fathers' time. Indeed, the appearance of the tree fully justified the supposition that it must have been some hundreds of years since this novel family vault was filled with its ghastly occupants.

The ascent of the volcano of Tongariro has (says the N. Z. Herald) been successfully made by Mr. Manson, an American tourist, who, with five guides, climbed to the summit of the crater of Oreoa. He describes the volcano as being an active geyser, throwing streams of boiling mud fully 500 feet high. The interior of the cone is surrounded by some 30 or more boiling springs and sulphur steam holes. The altitude of the summit of the cone is 7550 feet. The thermometer registered 6 deg. below zero. They were compelled through a snowstorm to remain in the crater all night, and nearly perished with cold. This is the first Pakeha whom the Ngatitamira have permitted to make the ascent of the sacred mountain. Others have attempted it, but were captured by the natives and turned off without very much ceremony. Tongariro, the burning mountain, is in the King country, and this concession to a Pakeha is considered as a strong evidence of their good feeling and the gradual breaking-up of animosities which have hitherto existed between the two races.

One of the most extraordinary escapes from a terrible death perhaps ever known is recorded in the Bathurst Free Press:—"On Wednesday last a young woman named M'George, who resides near Blayney, was walking along the railway line between the Newbridge and Blayney stations, and was about crossing the open bridge which spans a creek in that locality when the mixed train for Dubbo came down the incline on the Newbridge side, and she discovered by the whistle of the engine behind her that she was in imminent danger of being run over, as the train was rushing towards her with great speed. The fright caused her to miss her footing, and she fell between the beams of the bridge, and, her clothing preventing her from passing through, there she hung suspended, the upper portion of her body being above the level of the line. As may be imagined, the driver of the approaching train was horrified as the fact that he could not stop the train before reaching the bridge presented itself to his mind, while on the bridge he could see the woman apparently about to fall a victim to the iron monster upon which he rode. To his intense relief and surprise, however, he saw the woman sink between the beams into the creek below, as the train was advancing upon her, her struggling having caused the clothes which held her in such a dangerous position to give way. Having succeeded in stopping the train on the other side of the bridge, the driver hastened back to the creek and found that the young woman had fainted, and that she had also been bruised by her fall. She was lifted into the train and conveyed to the Blayney station in a very prostrate condition, and after receiving attention at the hands of the stationmaster there, she was conveyed to her place of residence. The escape was one of the most marvellous that we have ever had to record, and we are sure that our readers will join with us in expressing a hope that the young woman who was the subject of it will not feel any continuous evil effects."

The attendance of visitors at the Art Gallery of New South Wales, Inner Domain, during the last quarter of 1881, was 32,793, viz.—October, 8461; November, 13,082; December, 11,250. On New Year's Day (Monday), 3766 persons visited the gallery.

A correspondent telegraphs from Gunnedah that the report that sickness is "very rife" in Gunnedah is quite a mistake. The township and surrounding district are remarkably healthy, though the heat is very great and the river low.

[Reuter's Telegram.]

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

CAPE SUMMARY.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 4.

Mr. Hofney, who held no portfolio and drew no salary, has withdrawn from the Ministry, without assigning any reason; though, in consequence of its being stated in the Argus that the split in the Ministry was owing to the present or intended arrangements, the Zuid Afrika, Mr. Hofney's own newspaper, states that neither the Dutch and English question, nor Mr. Merriman's condemnation of the Africander bond lately at Groraf Reintt had anything do with it.

The Hon. T. Apington, Q.C., Attorney-General in Mr. Spragg's Cabinet, has published a protest against the removal of Cetewayo from the custody of the Colonial Government, maintaining the right of the Colonial Government to be consulted before Cetewayo can be removed out of the colony. It is said, however, that Mr. Henrique Shepstone will conduct the Zulu King, with three of his chiefs, to England early next year.

The news from Basutoland shows a very unsettled state of feeling there. The Loyals distrust the Government, which does nothing to support them, and the rebels openly slight it.

News from the Transvaal shows that great uneasiness still prevails in the Waakerstroom district, owing to the attitude of the natives, consequent on the change of Government. People are still said to be fleeing from Sydenberg to Pretoria since the departure of the troops.

Great depression prevails everywhere.

The cancelling of Mr. Sendall's appointment has everywhere been received with satisfaction. The Natalins desire Sir Evelyn Wood as Governor.

The Share market in Kimberley is suffering frightfully from forced sales. The Central Mining Company held its quarterly general meeting, but declared no dividend.

Another fatal boat accident, by which three lives were lost, took place on Friday night, when three men, Benjamin Brittany, a wharfinger, Horace Russell, tide waiter, and a young fellow named Clark, recently from the Diamond Fields, went out in a boat, which is supposed to have been caught in a squall and capsized, as nothing has since been heard of them.

Mr. Dowling, formerly M.L.A. for Atiwal North, was returned by a large majority for that district against Mr. Dewet, the Africander bond candidate.

The Orient's steamer Garonne, had a case of smallpox, which ended fatally (Mr. W. Day). 21 passengers for the Cape are to be landed at Saldanha Bay, and the Garonne will proceed, after receiving, with the necessary quarantine precautions, 400 tons of coal.

WRECK of the A. S. N. CO.'S STEAMER WOTONGA.

We learn that arrangements have been made for the Derwent (s.) to call off Port Macquarie on her way to Brisbane for the passengers, and convey them to their destination. No steamer left on Monday night, as was expected, for the simple fact that the day being a public holiday it was impossible to get a suitable boat. One or two that were available were of no use, owing to their being too large to be able to get in at Port Macquarie. Captain Darrell, of the Leichardt, on her way from Brisbane, was signalled to call at Port Macquarie. The accident, occurring as it did on a holiday, rendered the duties of the management here very difficult.

On Monday a telegram was received by Sir John Robertson from the Hon. Thomas M'Ilwraith, Acting Colonial Secretary, Brisbane, as follows:—"Have just heard that Wotonga is on shore, total wreck, five miles from Port Macquarie. Crew and passengers, numbering 70, have escaped with nothing but very scanty clothing. Will you send on steamer from Sydney to relieve them?"

Sir John Robertson sent the following telegram yesterday in reply:—"Passengers from Wotonga comfortably housed and cared for at Port Macquarie. Steamer Derwent leaves here to-night, and will call at Port Macquarie about noon to-morrow to take in any passengers. The Leichardt, coming south, will also call in this afternoon to take on any passengers who may wish to come on to Sydney. Government will also despatch small steamer to take passengers to steamers calling in, in case sea too rough for boats."

The loss of the Wotonga is an event which should have been fully reported on ere this. But there appears to have been remarkable reticence displayed on the part of those who might have given the fullest information in connection with the wreck. It is presumed that persons previously in authority on the Wotonga who are now playing the part of watchmen over the wreck must be too closely engaged to spare much time in transmitting to their employers an account of the circumstances which led up to the accident. Rumours of an unpleasant kind have been circulated as to the cause of the wreck, and mere rumour should be suffered to pass in silence. But these rumours are to some extent corroborated by a telegram signed by three of the passengers at Port Macquarie—Messrs. H. H. Perkins, G. Simpson, and G. C. Hawker—describing in undisguised language what they consider the cause of the wreck. They state that the "night was perfectly clear and the moon bright." Of course an inquiry will take place before the proper authority, when evidence may perhaps be forthcoming tending to show how a passenger steamer could steam away full speed on to the shore, not only with the advantage of moonlight, but—to quote again from the telegram before us—"with the lighthouse showing clearly almost half a mile on starboard." It is some slight consolation to find that the informants exonerate the captain from blame.

The following telegram was received yesterday from our correspondent at Port Macquarie:—"I visited the wreck this morning. The Wotonga lies broadside on the beach, with bow to north and list to starboard, half-a-mile south of Tacking Point lighthouse. The sea is smooth outside, but heavy rollers are constantly breaking over her. She is settled down in the sand, and may hold together for a long time; only the deck cargo and portions of her bulwarks with deck-house fittings have been washed ashore, the cargo in the hold being untouched. Captain M'Lean and officers behaved well, and through their exertions all were landed safely, without the slightest accident. It was most fortunate that the vessel went ashore where she did, and not half-a-mile further north, for in that case many lives would have been lost. Captain and police remain by the wreck. There is not the slightest chance of getting her off. The funnel has disappeared, but the masts are still standing. Weather fine."

Frank Harding, M.A., who twice determinedly attempted to commit suicide, owing to a love affair, died in the Melbourne Hospital last night from the effects of the second attempt. At the inquest the evidence showed that deceased had expressed to his friends a determination to kill himself, unless the young lady with whom he was in love would consent to marry him. It is stated that he resigned the curacy, and took the position of master of mathematics at Christ's College, in Tasmania, because he thought his rejection by the lady, who is the daughter of a well known clergyman, arose from the inferior position he occupied. A verdict of suicide while of unsound mind was returned. The coroner reprimanded the chemist who sold deceased the poison for failing to comply with the Sales of Poisons Act.

THE SOUTH AUSTRALIAN GOVERNMENT AND THE FOREST BOARD.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

At the Forest Board to-day the recent action of the Government towards the board in the matter of the transfer of garden blocks in a forest reserve from the private holder to a public company was discussed, and a resolution was adopted, to be forwarded to the Commissioner of Lands, that all further business be postponed till a reply be received. The private leaseholder applied for the transfer of the lease held from the board to a company, of which the Commissioner of Lands is one of the promoters. The board refused to sanction the transfer, on the grounds that it was against the intention of the Forest Act to allow ground in reserves to be used for trading purposes. The holder with the members of the proposed company appealed to the Commissioner of Lands, who stated that he would endeavour to induce the board to reconsider their decision, but subsequently announced that he would resume the lands in question from the Central Forest Board, it being understood that he would then execute a new lease direct from Government to the proposed company.

SMALLPOX ON BOARD THE GARONNE.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

Smallpox first appeared on board the Orient steamer Garonne 12 days after leaving Plymouth. The first patient died just before the vessel reached the Cape, and was a steerage passenger. Another steerage case was developed just before the burial of the first. The captain of the Garonne proceeded a long way out to bury the first victim. On his return he was informed that communication with land was cut off, and the vessel lay at anchor four days before the huts at the quarantine ground, Saldanha Bay, were ready, when 21 Cape passengers were landed, with the Rev. E. and Mrs. Denissens, who would proceed no further. The Garonne left Saldanha Bay on the 15th, leaving the infected passengers behind. Two days after being at sea the third case broke out, the patient being one of the firemen; and five days ago another case, a second-class passenger to Sydney, who is being attended by the fireman, now convalescent. The strictest isolation was enforced on board. All the passengers were vaccinated, and clothes likely to convey contagion were thrown overboard. The mails were landed without being fumigated, and the cargo will be placed in lighters. The men on the steamer are without any aid from shore.

CENTRAL KEMPSEY, Tuesday.

Large numbers congregated at the Smithtown Regatta, which passed off pleasantly, and about 400 persons attended the Wesleyan excursion to the Macleay Heads, in the Platypus, greatly enjoying the treat. The weather was much milder than last week, when the thermometer stood at 95° in Kempsey, and 102° in West Kempsey, during parts of Thursday and Friday.

The defendant said that he took it while repairing the pump in the distillery, during which repairs he had placed the bucket to catch what was leaking out. He added that he had given the spirit away, and expressed sorrow for what he had done. The Bench fined him £1, with the alternative of one week in gaol. The fine was paid.

THE TRAMWAYS.

The Marrickville tramway, which is the latest acquisition to the metropolitan system, but which, in its present form, may be almost regarded as an independent section, has been largely availed of by the residents of the borough since it was opened on Friday last. It is estimated that during Saturday, Sunday, and Monday the fares amounted to 3690; and judging by the number of persons one omnibus will carry, it may be seen that the cars have performed the service of about 90 such vehicles. This of course has only transpired in connection with a holiday season, and it may happen that for a period the success on ordinary days will not be nearly so marked. Judging, however, from the facts that not long since the residents of Marrickville had much difficulty in securing an efficient omnibus service, and that since then and since the laying of the tramway was determined upon the borough has progressed with remarkable activity, and that population is being rapidly augmented numerically there; and seeing, also, that if the residents were to offer the citizens of Sydney the attractions of a comfortable park, well supplied with shade trees and water, the probability is that the number of persons who will travel over the line when it is completed will be very large indeed. At any rate the ordinary traffic of the line is likely to make it a paying one. It will be well though for the residents to thoroughly consider this question of providing a park. Tramways are being constructed not alone that people in the suburbs should reach the city, but also that citizens might be taken to healthy breathing places, and on this account we think a park should be provided not only at Marrickville, but at each of the tram termini that extend any distance into the open country. Though there are many beautiful resorts in close proximity to the city, people like the excitement of rapid travelling, especially when it is cheap, and on this account the suburbs may anticipate a large advent of them, and should prepare some open space for their outpouring from the cars. In the report of the proceedings of the opening of the Marrickville line it was inadvertently omitted to be stated that at the banquet the chair was occupied by Mr. Gerald Halligan. On Monday the cars on the other lines were absolutely rushed by the people, and were it not for the care and forbearance exercised by the officials some accident might have occurred. On the Randwick and Moore Park line 50,000 fares were collected, on the Waverley and Woollahra 16,000, on the Redfern 9000, and on the Crown-street line 5500, and a number of children were carried who were not called upon to pay. The fact that, although the motors passed through thoroughfares fairly filled with people, omnibuses, and cabs, neither accidents to life nor breakdown to machinery occurred, is reassuring to the public mind, and reflects credit on the department. One matter which created some inconvenience was the watering of Oxford-street with salt water at a late hour in the morning. The water makes the rails greasy, and is sometimes the means of bringing a motor to a standstill, and thus creating a delay which a little forethought on the part of the Corporation might prevent.

AMUSEMENTS.

There is nothing very new to announce with regard to any of the places of amusement. "Sinbad the Sailor" is likely to hold the stage for some time at the Theatre Royal, and at the Gaiety "The Green Lanes of England" has made a decided hit. At the Opera House "Patience" is to be played for a little time longer, after which there will probably be a season of English opera; and at the Queen's Theatre "Blue Beard" goes smoothly and successfully. It is advertised that the Circus season is very near its close.

TAMWORTH LIVE STOCK REPORT.

[By Telegraph.]

TAMWORTH, Tuesday.

At Messrs. Nathan Cohen and Co.'s regular weekly auction sales of fat stock to-day the market was fully supplied. Prices ruled about 14s per hundred, with a downward tendency. They sold Colly Creek bullocks from £5 10s. to £5 12s 6d. There was a full supply of sheep. Sold Conroy's wethers at 6s; Dugan's ewes, 4s 10d.

The Medical Journal tells us that the two big doctors—Messrs. Hamilton and Agnew—who attended on President Garfield have charged no less than 1000 dollars a day (no doubt those vaguely-expressed bulletins required much brain work to fabricate), while the hardworking subordinates are content with 100 dollars. So great, however, is the good feeling on all sides towards the memory of the late President that double the charge would not have been murmured at.

THE MATCH BETWEEN THE ENGLISH ELEVEN AND THE COMBINED TEAM.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The match was resumed this morning shortly after 11 o'clock. The weather was beautifully fine, and there was a large attendance again, fully 11,000 being present. The grand stand and ladies' reserve were crowded, and keen interest was displayed in the progress of the match, which will possibly be played out, it having been decided to play on until 4 to-morrow, the steamer by which the Englishmen were to have sailed for New Zealand this evening having been delayed with the object of allowing the match to be concluded. Horan and Palmer, the not out men, resumed their wickets to the bowling of Peate and Midwinter. Horan hit the first from Peate to square-leg for a single. In the next over from Midwinter, Horan put the ball into the slips nicely for 4, and obtained a couple for a drive. Palmer then hit Peate to on for 3. Horan drove the same bowler for a single. After a maiden from Midwinter, Palmer again got Peate for a triplet, and a single off Midwinter's next. Horan drove the next ball off for 4, and the Englishmen's score in their first innings was beaten, amidst loud applause. A maiden from Peate. Horan scored 4 off Midwinter for a hit to leg. Peate bowled a couple more maidens. Palmer ran 3 for hit to leg off Midwinter, and obtained a single from Peate's next. Bates relieved Midwinter. Palmer was caught at the wickets in his first over, and returned to the pavilion amidst great cheering. 7-31-305. Evans followed, and scored a single off Bates, and another off Peate for a nice hit to leg. Both batsmen drove Peate for a single, and then Bates clean-bowled Evans. 8-3-309. Boyle joined Horan, whose career was, however, very soon afterwards closed, for in attempting a run he failed to gain his wicket before the bails were removed, Selby fielding very smartly. Hearty cheers, in which the Englishmen joined, were given as Horan returned to the pavilion; the board showing 9-124-309. Cooper joined Boyle, and batted very steadily until, after scoring 7 by singles, he was stumped by Pilling. Boyle, the not out man, having only 4 to his credit. The innings thus closed for 320, or 26 in advance of the Englishmen.

The wickets having been rolled, the Englishmen commenced their second innings, Ulyett and Barlow going first to the wickets. Palmer opened with a maiden to Ulyett. Evans took up the bowling at the other end, and Barlow got a single off his first over for a hit to off. A single to Barlow, and 4 to Ulyett for a fine hit to leg off Palmer's next. Three maidens were bowled, and Ulyett hit Palmer to off for a single, Barlow getting a brace for a hit to on off the last ball. A single to Ulyett, and a couple to Barlow off Evans' next. Both batsmen scored a single off Palmer's next. A maiden from Evans to Barlow. Another single to Ulyett off Palmer. A maiden at each end, a single to Ulyett from each bowler, and Barlow put Palmer to the on for 3. Evans bowled a maiden, and Ulyett drove Palmer for a single, the ball being well fielded by Giffen. One more maiden from Evans to Barlow, the Welshman's bowling requiring to be treated with much care. Cooper relieved Palmer. Ulyett stepped out to his second ball and drove it to the pavilion fence for 4, putting the succeeding ball to leg for a similar number, and bringing 30 up. Evans added another to the list of maidens. A single and brace to Ulyett, and a single to Barlow off Cooper's next. Barlow was unable to score off Evans. A single to each off Cooper, but the last ball of the over Ulyett stepped out, missed, and was cleverly stumped by Blackham. 1-25-37. Selby, the next man, put Cooper to off for a couple, and to leg for a single, Evans meanwhile continuing his maidens. No runs were scored off Cooper's next. Barlow got hold of one from Evans, which he sent to the chains at on for 4. Selby hit Cooper hard to leg, but only a single resulted, M'Donnell returning the ball smartly. A couple to Selby off Cooper for a hit to leg, and 3 to the same batsman off the same bowler; a drive from Barlow following with a single. No runs had been scored off Evans' last three overs. After a little uneventful play an adjournment was made for lunch. On resuming, Evans bowled a maiden. Selby hit Cooper up to leg. Boyle made a great effort to catch it, but the chance, which was a very difficult one, was missed. Evans bowled another maiden, and Selby got Cooper to the chains to leg for 4, Boyle not being able to stop the ball. A single to each batsman off the following two balls and 1 to Barlow off Evans' next. Selby cut Cooper for 3, Barlow putting the next ball to leg for 1. A brace to Barlow off Evans, and the same batsman sneaked 1 for a hit past the bowler. Selby hit Cooper prettily to leg for 4. Some of the spectators commenced to cry "Take him off." Runs were rarely scored off Evans, and each maiden was followed by a round of applause. Another 4 to Selby off Cooper for a hit into the chains to leg. Selby stonewalled Evans, and Palmer relieved Cooper, to the evident satisfaction of a portion of the spectators. A maiden at each end, and a single to Barlow off Palmer. Selby drove the same bowler in the next over for a brace. A few singles were scored in the following four overs, and Barlow's bails were smartly removed by Blackham before the batsman, who had incautiously stepped out to greet one from Palmer, had recovered his ground. 2-33-95. Bates filled the vacancy. After a little uneventful play, Selby managed to get one from Evans into the slips for 4. An over or two later the same batsman cut Evans for 4. In Palmer's next Selby spooned one behind the wickets, which M'Donnell ought to have taken, but failed. Bates afterwards hit Palmer to leg for 3, and a single sneaked for a hit between the wickets. A careless piece of fielding on the part of Massie caused an additional single to be added to the score. Boyle relieved Evans. His first over produced a single to each batsman. In the next over of the same bowler, Blackham received a nasty blow from the ball, necessitating his retirement, and Murdoch took the position at the wickets, Horan acting as his substitute in the field. Palmer bowled a maiden to Bates. Selby hit Boyle to on for one, Bates adding a brace to his score for a hit in the same direction, slowly fielded by Horan. A maiden at each end. Selby got a single off Boyle, and 4 for a good leg hit off Palmer's next. A single to Selby, a brace to Bates off Boyle, and the former got Palmer away to leg for 3, Bates following with a fine hit to off for a similar number off Boyle. Cooper again went on vice Palmer, and puzzled Selby greatly in his first over. Evans, amidst applause, again took the ball at the opposite end. Bates slipped the third ball for a triplet. A hit by Bates to leg off Cooper brought 4, Massie allowing the ball to pass between his legs. Another couple to Bates off Cooper. Evans bowled a maiden, and Bates placed Cooper to leg for a brace, and hit the next ball close to the chains, where it was well fielded by Giffen; only a single resulted. A short adjournment was then made. Blackham resumed at the wickets. Selby cut Cooper for 3, and scored a single for a similar hit off Evans, Bates getting another for a hit in the same direction. Three to Selby off Cooper for a hit to off; several singles at each end. Bates placed Evans to leg, following with a couple off Cooper; but his innings terminated in the next ball, which he hit to off field, where Bannerman made a nice single-handed catch. 3-47-179. Shrewsbury came next, but after a few singles were run Selby skied one from Cooper at short leg, where it was well taken by Boyle, greatly to the relief of the supporters of the Combined team, who began to fear the Englishman was going to rival Horan's performance of the previous day. 4-70-183. Midwinter followed. In the first over from Evans the new-comer got one away to off for a quartette, but almost immediately afterwards made a prodigious hit at one from Cooper, which lifted towards Massie, near the chains, and the fieldsman made a brilliant catch. 5-4-189. Emmett joined Shrewsbury, and soon afterwards played Cooper to the pavilion fence for 4, Shrewsbury adding a couple for a hit to on off Evans. Cooper in the next over, clean bowled Emmett. 6-6-197. Scotton now joined Shrewsbury. After a maiden at each end, Scotton played Evans for a single, with another for an overthrow. Some singles in the next few overs, and Palmer relieved Evans. Scotton cut his first ball for 3. A single to Shrewsbury, Bannerman failing to pick up the ball. The play for the next few minutes was very slow, until Cooper, whose bowling was proving very successful, succeeded in clean bowling Shrewsbury. 7-16-217. Shaw, the next, nearly fell a victim to Palmer shortly after taking his stand at the wicket, through knocking the ball in the direction of Massie, who, however, was unable to reach it. After each had gained a few singles, Shaw got Cooper away twice in succession for a brace each. In Cooper's next the ball glanced off Shaw's bat, giving Blackham a hard chance at the wickets, which he missed through the wicket-keeper slipping. Boyle relieved Cooper, and bowled a maiden to Scotton. Shaw obtained a single off Palmer for a hit to the off. The next over from Boyle gave two chances at point, which were not accepted, Cooper standing too far out. Scotton hit Palmer nicely to leg for 4. It being now 6, the stumps were drawn.

THE TURF.

The general settling over the late Tattersall's annual meeting took place at Tattersall's last evening, when everything passed off very pleasantly. Mr. J. B. Oliffe occupied the chair, and stated that if the present committee held office next year, they intended to raise the added money for Tattersall's Cup to 1000 sovereigns; and Mr. E. E. Jones expressed his willingness to supplement the stakes by giving a gold cup value 100 sovereigns to the winner. Mr. W. Kelso, the owner of Lord Orville, called for champagne, and the health of the committee, proposed by Mr. Jones, was drunk in bumpers. The following sums were paid to the winners:—Mr. W. Kelso, £610; J. Cook, £212; P. J. M'Allister, £192; G. Adams, £100; A. E. Cornwell, £25; G. Donnelly, £50; M. Sheehan, £30; F. L. Baker, £23; M. Lyons, £20; F. Weston, £15; total, £1383.

NEWCASTLE ANNUAL REGATTA.

NEWCASTLE, Jan. 2.

This time-honoured annual aquatic festival came off to-day in Newcastle harbour and, as usual, was attended with the success and eclat for which these gatherings have become remarkable. For once, in the history of Newcastle regattas, however, the hitherto invariable north-easter failed in making its appearance, for after an unusually sultry morning the wind suddenly chopped round to the southward, and, for a while, blew very hard, but moderated into a nice steady breeze as the afternoon advanced. The splendid steamship Coonanbara was secured by the committee as flagship, and afforded every convenience to the crowds that patronised her. On the wharfs, throughout the day, the scene was all bustle and excitement from the busy throngs that promenaded back and forth, watching the various races. The city was positively filled to overflowing with people from the country and the district around. The results of the various events are as follows:—

First Race.—For youths under 19 years pulling pair sculls in dingies not exceeding 15 feet overall. First prize, £4 4s.; second, £1 1os. Louise, W. Trelevan, 1; Uno, G. Campbell, 2; Arrow, J. Deveraux, 3. Campbell would have won this race but for his steering a faulty course.

Second Race.—For working licensed watermen's skiffs not exceeding 22 feet, under canvas. First prize, £9; second £3. Myalla, W. Torgue, 1; Louise, J. Dempsey, 2. The Edith, Dart, and Young Australia also started.

Third Race.—For amateurs pulling pair of sculls in light watermen's skiffs. First prize, £8; second, 2. Maggie, M. Jordan, 1; Go-as-you-please, C. Croese, 2. Croese led most of the way, but he was overhauled in turning home by Jordan, who then won comfortably.

Fourth Race.—For men employed in Government service pulling two pairs sculls in watermen's skiffs. First prize, £8; second, £2. Violet—J. Deas, T. Deas (coxswain, R. Hickey), 1; Gem—R. Laurence, W. Parson (coxswain, Gordon), 2. The Edith gave up shortly after starting, allowing the others to finish as above.

Fifth Race.—For dingies under canvas not exceeding 19 feet overall. First prize, £15; second, £4. Saucy Jack—J. Dempsey, 1 minute, 1; Resette—W. Robson, scratch, 2; Frolic, J. Towns, 1 minute, 3. Alpha, 2 minutes, also started.

Sixth Race.—For gentlemen amateurs pulling two pairs sculls in light watermen's skiffs. Prize, trophy, £6 6s. Grand Flaneur—J. Lockhead, E. Hannell (coxswain, Burrowes), 1; N. R. C.—E. Graham, R. Burke (coxswain, G. G.), 2; Patience—R. R. King, J. Macdermott (coxswain, Garner), 3. This was a splendidly contested race between the first two boats. Flaneur led most of the way, and was then passed by Graham's boat near the home beacon: but the positions were again reversed in the turn, and Flaneur won by a third of a length.

Seventh Race.—For youths not exceeding 20 years pulling pair sculls in light watermen's skiffs. First prize, £5; second, 2os. Go-as-you-please—A. Campbell, 1; Rose—J. Hill, 2. The Maggie, H. Morris, gave up.

Eight Race.—For all comers who have never won a money prize pulling pair sculls in watermen's skiffs. First prize, £6; second, £2. Terror—A. George, 1; Rachael—G. Judge, 2; Gem—G. Campbell, 3; Little Nellie—R. Elliott; Maitland—M. Frazer; Violet—G. Blackwell; Daisy—Devonux. Won by two lengths.

Ninth Race.—Sailing race for all boats not exceeding 34 feet overall. First prize, £30; second, £5. St Crispin—J. Martin, 22 feet, handicap 2 minutes, 1; Zephyr—W. Witten, 22 feet, handicap 4 minutes, 2. Dreamland and Conadah were entered, but did not start, and Crispin easily scored a victory over the remaining boat.

The Tenth Race, for flat-bottomed punts, was not concluded.

Eleventh Race.—For amateurs pulling two pairs sculls in light watermen's skiffs. First prize, £12; second, £3. Maggie—M. Jordan, — Morris (coxswain, Gordon), 1; Shamrock—J. Foote, G. Foote (coxswain, Barnett), 2; Go-as-you-please—C. Croese, R. Hughes (coxswain, W. Croese), 0. The latter gave up.

Special Race.—For all boats not exceeding 25 feet; four pairs sculls. First prize, £12; second, £3. Mainbrace—R. Hickey, R. Hughes, C. Croese, A. Campbell, 1; Chester—T. Warland, A. Miner, C. Tongue, W. Tongue, 2; Hunter—A. Foote, C. Foote, H. Phillips, D. Ross. The latter gave up, and allowed Hickey's crew and the Chester to fight it out, the result being as above.

NATIONAL REGATTA, 1882.

The National Regatta Committee met last night at the Exchange Hotel, Mr. Creagh in the chair. Sub-committees were appointed to secure the flagship, as also for catering, sailing, handicapping, &c. It was resolved to invite the attendance of the Russian Admiral, and the officers of the men-of-war ships now in harbour, on board the flagship. In order to guarantee success it is necessary that liberal sums should be forthcoming, in order to make the programme as enticing as possible. The committee, who appear to be throwing their best energies into the business, in order to attain an unprecedented measure of success, are sanguine that, from present prospects, they will make the big event one worthy of a national aquatic meeting.

BOWLING.

Our Melbourne correspondent telegraphs that in the bowling match, Victoria Club v. New South Wales, the latter won by 14 points.

In our report of the Lane Cove Regatta, in the sixth race—skiffs under canvas—the Desdemona is mentioned as though that boat had been in the race, but not placed. The Desdemona, however, did not start, having been withdrawn by her owner, Mr. P. O. Williams, in consequence of a domestic bereavement.

ELECTORATE OF REDFERN.

A meeting of electors of the district of Redfern favourable to the return of Mr. John Williamson, a candidate for the vacancy in the Legislative Assembly caused by the appointment of the Hon. John Sutherland to the Legislative Council, was held at the Town-hall, Redfern, last evening. There were about 200 persons present, and the Mayor of Redfern (Mr. P. Stanley) occupied the chair.

The Chairman said that, through the resignation of the Hon. John Sutherland as a representative in the Legislative Assembly for the district of Redfern, a vacancy had occurred, and Mr. John Williamson, who was present, and about to express his views, was one of the gentlemen seeking the suffrages of the electors. Mr. Williamson was, he dared to say, well known to all present, and therefore it was not necessary for him (the chairman) to dilate upon his good qualities. The candidate had been known to him for about 30 years as a man of integrity, perseverance, ability, and thorough honesty, and as one who had been closely identified with every movement which was calculated to confer benefit upon that community. Mr. Williamson had given proof of extremely liberal views in the part which he had taken in various public questions. He (Mr. Stanley) was there in his official capacity as Mayor of the borough to preside over that meeting; but, in addition, he had no hesitation in stating that he was supporting Mr. Williamson in his candidature, believing that that gentleman was a very fit and proper person to represent the district in Parliament. There was one thing which he thought no one would attempt to gainsay, and that was the advantage of having a local man to represent the electorate, to whom they might go whenever they had any real or supposed grievance to communicate. He had expressed his intention of supporting Mr. Williamson, and he did not think it would be supposed that he did so because he was under any obligation to Mr. Williamson, for it would be remembered that the gentleman who was now a candidate opposed him (Mr. Stanley) when he sought similar honours. He, however, gave Mr. Williamson credit for being thoroughly conscientious in the opposition which he then manifested, as he did give others who had opposed him credit for having acted in accordance with their consciences. He owed nothing to Mr. Williamson in a political or in any other sense; but should support him, believing that he was thoroughly qualified to represent the electorate. He then called upon the candidate to address the meeting.

Mr. J. Williamson was received with applause. He said it must be pleasing to any man who was about to offer himself as a candidate for a constituency, and to address an audience like that, to hear himself spoken of in such high terms, and especially by one whom he had opposed on a previous occasion. He had to thank the Mayor very cordially for the manner in which he had spoken of him. He was desirous of having conferred upon him the honour of being made their representative, and he had been told by those who were opposing him that the only reason they had for objecting to him was his views upon the Education Act. But, before referring further to that point, he would remark that he was known to most of those present; he had been boy and then man amongst them; had lived for many years in their neighbourhood; had rubbed shoulder to shoulder with them in fighting the battles in conjunction with their members in securing the political privileges which they at present enjoyed. (Hear, hear.) And if any of his actions had been such as to prove him unworthy of their confidence, it would be for them to say so. He was glad to be able to say that there was nothing in the Constitution which made either creed or class a bar to any man seeking legislatorial honours. The first political topic to which he would advert was that out of which the opposition of some of the electors of the district had arisen, and that was the Public Education Act of the colony. He was convinced that that Act had conferred very great benefits upon the people of New South Wales. (Hear, hear.) The first year of the operation of that Act the returns showed that the attendance at the schools was 28,434, but in the course of 10 years the number of children attending schools had increased to 106,692. He thought that no man of common sense would deny that the Act had conferred very great advantages upon the colony. We had no State Church here, and it was only right that they should have no State schools in which religion should be taught. If it was deemed that theology should be taught in the schools, it was only right that it should be taught by ecclesiastical bodies. The Government having provided no State-aid to religion, had no right to interfere with the religious training of any child attending the Public schools. If he was elected as their representative, he would not support any alteration which would interfere with the principle or retard the operation of the Education Act now in existence. What he wanted to see was the provisions of the Act extended so that even greater advantages would be conferred upon the colony at large. He considered that the Act was a wise piece of legislation. He also desired to see High or Grammar schools together with Technical schools fostered, so that young men might have greater educational advantages, and might with greater facility apply themselves to the study of mechanical improvements. Considering the population of the colony he thought that the time had arrived when that portion of the Act which provided for these things should be brought into operation. (Hear, hear.) He was also desirous of seeing cookery classes established in the various girls' schools, believing that such classes would eventually be the means of conferring a great boon upon the colony. They would prove an important factor in the promotion of domestic economy and comfort, and would make better men and better husbands. The next subject that he would allude to was that of free trade. He had always been an advocate and supporter of free trade, because he believed that the best mode of promoting the manufacturing interests was to allow them to have free competition. He would submit a few figures to them which would show that, although other colonies might prefer protection, the residents of this colony had no reason to complain of the advances which had taken place in this colony under the operation of free trade principles. He would glance at a period of 10 years. In 1868 our population was 466,765, but, under the auspices of free trade, it in ten years—that was, in 1878—had increased to 693,743. During the same period the number of schools had increased from 1251 to 1744, and the number of scholars from 56,535 to 118,788, while mills and manufactories had risen from 3743 to 11,057. In 1868 the acreage under crop was 434,755, as against 613,612 in 1878, while horses, sheep, and cattle had increased in number from 17,122,854 to 27,075,101, and the value of the coal raised had risen from £954,231 to £1,772,257. Some other noteworthy increases were as follow:—The tonnage of shipping in the harbour from 724,193 to 1,267,371; wool, 25,721,632 lb. to 114,833,017 lb.; and imports, from £8,051,577 to £14,768,873. Then the revenue of the colony had leapt from £2,476,700 in 1869 to £6,708,017 in 1878. Having made such leaps and bounds under the wise provisions of a policy of free-trade, surely they had nothing to fear. It must not be thought that he was against local industries. That was far from being the case, as he believed in a fording encouragement to local industries. (Hear, hear.) He was in favour of the manufacture of railway material, rolling stock, &c., required by the Government being first offered to local manufacturers, to whom preference should be given, providing that they could execute the work, even if a little more money had to be paid for it than if it were obtained from England. (Cheers.) With regard to the question of immigration he thought they would be convinced of the necessity of it when they remembered the enormous area of the colony, which was 323,427 miles in extent and capable of supporting 142,000,000 of people, whilst the present population was only 750,000. He was in favour of the introduction of a limited number of persons of an intelligent and respectable class from different portions of the United Kingdom. He considered it would be exceedingly desirable to secure a properly regulated influx of persons who were able to pay part of the cost of emigrating to the colony. He was opposed to the introduction of people in such numbers as to interfere with workmen of any trade. He recognized what had already been done by means of railways and the necessity for the extension of existing and construction of other lines. He thought that the tariff charges for conveying goods should be such as to afford every encouragement to settlers in the country to send their produce to the metropolis, and so low as to only provide for a small return to the Government. He was convinced of the necessity for extending the railway from the terminus to the Circular Quay, so that goods might be landed at the wharfs and sent inland without any delay. He thought that the enormous amount of traffic on the tramway from Redfern to Hunter-street proved the necessity for constructing a railway from Redfern to Circular Quay. He referred the necessity that existed for some amendment of the land Laws. Wool being one of the staple commodities, he thought that they should not take undue advantage of the squatter. He was of opinion that fixed tenure should be given to squatters for the purpose of improving their properties and the finances of the colony. He would never consent to the remission of interest to the free selector. (Hear, hear.) Having spoken in support of the eight-hour system of labour, he expressed his intention, if elected, to support liberal measures. He also expressed himself in favour of a system of sewerage and water supply, and the Government undertaking the management of the Savings Banks of the colony. He considered that the new Licensing Act would prove a boon to the colony, and was especially pleased at the recognition of the principle contained in the 83rd and 84th sections of the Act. There were, however, some clauses which he did not altogether approve of. He did not think that the owner of a property should be called upon to suffer serious loss in consequence of some action on the part of the tenant of a house. If elected he should advocate the principle of local government, feeling convinced that it would prove very advantageous to the colony. If returned he could assure them that he was not one who would seek personal favours from any Government. What he desired to be was a fair, independent, and honest representative.

In reply to electors the candidate expressed himself in favour of every tenant exercising a vote in the election of aldermen provided he complied with the Municipal Act, and stated he was also in favour of an absentee tax.

Mr. H. Richardson proposed, Mr. Robert Broughton seconded, and the Rev. W. Slatyer supported, a motion, affirming that Mr. Williamson was a fit and proper person to represent the electorate in Parliament, and the resolution was carried unanimously.

Cheers having been given for the Queen, and a vote of thanks passed to the Chairman, the meeting, which had been very orderly, terminated.

Mr. Alexander Kethel desires us to state that the advertisement which appeared in our columns announcing that he was a candidate for the representation of Redfern was inserted without his authority, during his absence from town, and that he is not a candidate.

THE LICENSING ACT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I am not at all surprised to find that the admission made in my second letter on this subject has been made the most of in support of the case against existing licenses. Your acute correspondent "Amicus" in this morning's Herald has not been slow to detect the advantage offered by my surrender of the verbal argument—that is to say, the argument derived from the expression "License under this part." When the point comes to be argued before the Supreme Court next term, counsel for the licensed victuallers (the defendants) will probably make the utmost of every point which can be made, and among others, of that which I have declared my willingness to give up.

In the meantime, I must remind "Amicus" and those who think with him that his letter is no reply either to the opinion of Mr. Salomons or to my own argument, which, proceeding upon independent ground, avoided as much as possible anything like mere repetition of the points relied upon by Mr. Salomons.

"Amicus" is mistaken in saying that there is no instance in the Act of a restricted meaning being given to the words "License under this part," except in the 35th section. There are several sections in which these words must be confined to new licenses, e.g., the "40th section which prescribes the scales of fees to be paid annually in respect of licenses under this part," also the 23rd and 29th (substantially). Nothing is clearer to me than that this second part of the Act was designed to be primarily applicable to a new system of licensing and therefore to new licenses only, and that the link which extends its provisions effectively to existing licensees and licenses is to be found in the concluding paragraph of section 2. "All licenses granted under any such repealed Act shall continue and remain in force for the respective periods for which they were granted, but shall be held in all respects, and all renewals thereof shall be applied for, under and subject to the provisions of this Act unless hereinafter otherwise specially provided for."

I should like to know what meaning can be given to the former part of this section which gives "rights acquired" under the repealed Act other than that contended for. "Amicus" does not assert that the right to keep open during the hours permitted by section 40 of the repealed Act is not a right so acquired, but says that the qualification upon the repeal effected by this second section is limited to repeal only and not to express enactment—in other words that section 63 is an independent and express enactment, having nothing to do with repeal, but specially setting up new hours of sale; and that it is, therefore, outside the qualifying words referred to. But the manifest intention of these words is to keep alive among other matters all "acquired rights" gained under the Act repealed.

No section of any Act of Parliament (as "Amicus" must know) can be isolated from its fellows, and construed as if no other section could have any bearing on it. From Lord Coke down to the present Lord Chief Justice we find the Judges laying down rules for the construction of Acts in such terms as these:—"It is the most natural and genuine exposition of a statute to construe one part of the statute by another part of the same statute, for that best expresses the meaning of the makers." "The office of a good expositor of an Act of Parliament is to make construction on all the parts together, and not of one part only by itself." "The intent of the Legislature is not to be collected from any particular expression, but from a general view of the whole Act." "We must look to the whole scope of an Act in order to understand it." And to these I might add scores of similar dicta derived from the text writers and digests.

Applying recognized principles of construction such as those quoted to the construction of section 63 of the Licensing Act, I find no difficulty in maintaining that it prohibits all holders of publicans' licenses (among others) from keeping their premises open for the sale of liquor, unless between the hours of 6 a.m. and 11 p.m. on business days, subject, however, to the retention of a right acquired by existing holders of publicans' licenses to keep their premises open during the hours specified in the 40th section of the repealed Act. "Amicus," who would isolate the 63rd section and construe it as if it stood by itself, proposes to ignore or nullify the saving of "rights acquired" declared by the 2nd section. I believe in a different method of construing Acts of Parliament. A meaning ought to be given to every word, wherever a reasonable meaning can be adopted. It is quite possible to give a fair and sensible meaning to section 63, and the same to section 2 of the new Act. The construction put upon these sections by "Amicus" may be sensible enough from his point of view, but it certainly is not fair from any point of view. And I think the Supreme Court will find some difficulty in interpreting the 63rd section as if it had no bearing on any other section or any other on it; or as if, in dealing with the rights of publicans, "fairness" is a secondary consideration.

January 3. LEX

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It would appear, upon perusal of your report of speeches made at a meeting of licensed victuallers, held at the Masonic Hall last evening, that the interests of the trade had been entirely neglected, whereas the reverse has been the case. The councils of both associations have, at different times, called meetings at which the trade was invited to consider the Licensing Bills, and little or no interest seemed to be taken by those most interested; notably a meeting of the City and Provincial Licensed Victuallers' Association, held at Perkins' Royal Exchange Hotel, on the 12th July last, at which only about 30 licensed victuallers and others attended. The chairman on that occasion entreated all concerned to put their shoulders to the wheel and assist in all conceivable ways to amend the highly objectionable clauses in the Licensing Bill; and the council of that association devoted all their energies in considering the various clauses, and a petition was engrossed, presented and read in Parliament. Again, when the amended bill was brought forward the same council met and drew up a second petition, which was also presented to Parliament. We have reason to think that notice had been taken of some of their principal objections by the important alterations made. When the Licensing Bill was presented to the Legislative Council, a similar course was pursued. The New South Wales Licensed Victuallers' Association also adopted similar proceedings, and everything was done that could possibly be—by argument and influence—to secure concessions in the interests of the trade.

From the outset it was apparent that scarcely any alterations could possibly be expected. Even Sir Henry Parkes spoke in the most disparaging terms, and stated that he had no sympathy with publicans.

After the Licensing Bill was finally hurried through the Legislative Council, we again met to consider what steps should be taken. Messrs. Gannon and M'Laughlin's opinion were sought, and counsel's opinion was just about being taken when the Christmas holidays intervened, and this meeting was summoned in ignorance of said steps having been taken. Had the same interest been evinced at the time the trade was entreated to come forward, months ago, I feel certain many more concessions would have been made. No stone has been left unturned by the councils of the Licensed Victuallers' Associations. It is a very easy matter to complain of something having been left undone; but such complaints are generally made by those who have troubled themselves the least. The old adage about everybody's business being nobody's business has been strikingly exemplified. The petition to which one of the speakers referred did not emanate from either association. It was got up by the proprietors of the Licensed Victuallers' Gazette. When such a petition was spoken of months before, it was pooh-poohed, the general opinion being that it would not avail anything in the face of the teetotal strength and pressure in the Legislative Assembly. I am, &c.,

December 28. R. A. WATSON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Both the chairman and Mr. Kelly use words in their addresses the meaning of which it is impossible for me as a citizen to understand. Mr. Hunt says, "They should stand together, and try the question in the law courts; if they failed of success then, the citizens he had no doubt would be enlivened sufficiently to a sense of their requirements to take the matter up." Mr. Kelly says, "They were present that they might ask to keep their houses open as they had been doing, for another six months. At the end of that period, the bill, so far as the hours of opening houses were concerned, would become law, but by that time the people who would see that they would be sufferers, would rise up against the measure, and the publicans should assist them."

Now, sir, there does not appear that either of these speakers comprehends for one moment that the citizens are not interested in aiding publicans to take from them the sum of £1 to £5 every night for every public-house (some 800) in Sydney after 11 o'clock at night. If nothing else opened the eyes of thinking men I hope the statement of Mr. Hunt will do so; and that to allow their families to suffer to the fearful extent of £11,200 per week is utterly unbearable. This is the sum of the lowest estimate—£4, and for only half the public-houses, or £582,400 a year, after 11 o'clock at night, in perfect waste of means, misery to thousands of families, despondency and despair to all the charitable and missionary efforts of the people, breaking the hearts of wives and mothers and sisters of good and true men, drinking when their senses are half-gone after 11 at night. A SUFFERER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have noticed a good deal of correspondence that has been going on in the papers in reference to the interpretation of certain clauses in the New Licensing Act of 1882, as to whether the Act affects licenses issued by the Government under the Act of 1862. The public at the present time appear hardly to contemplate the serious question of the new Licensing Bill coming into force on the 1st instant.

As I remarked in my letter to the Herald of the 23rd ultimo, the Government in June last entered into a contract with the publican for a period of 12 months under the Licensing Bill of 1862. After six months of this contract expires the Parliament bring in a law (we will assume for the sake of argument) which breaks this contract, and the Minister for Justice intends to enforce the law under this new Act. I do not for a single moment deny that the Parliament have the power to bring in such an Act; but I argue, if the Act is enforced, the publican will have the power to bring an action against the Government for a breach of contract, which undoubtedly it is. There are about 3000 publicans in New South Wales, and to compensate them for this breach of contract it will cost the country some thousands of pounds. Are the public going to stand this?

Again, if this law is enforced before the 1st of July next, and the publican has not the power to obtain compensation, all contracts entered into by the Government, whether railways, bridges, debentures, &c., are not worth the paper they are written on, as the Parliament may at any time bring in a law before the contract is completed to do away with that contract.

So I argue, if the Government enforce the first section in this new Act, it will cost the country some thousands of pounds. Yours, &c.,

M. GAMBETTA'S MINISTRY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Nov. 18.

Never did a Ministerial crisis through all its stages of incubation until the final shell-breaking occasion less excitement than that which has just resulted in what Opposition papers ironically term "Le Grand Ministere." M. Gambetta is now the Premier of France, and there is no man behind the scenes able to rule him as he ruled others who filled his present position. Before I enter upon details respecting the new Ministry, I must take up the thread of my narrative where it broke off just before the expected interpellation on the Tunisian policy of the Government. It is customary for Ministers to wait until they are openly blamed before they reply to reproaches. But it was reserved for M. Ferry to present us the curious spectacle of a Minister replying in advance of his accusers. He opened the debate on the Tunisian question by defending the Government from all the hostile criticism of the newspapers, believing that the arguments about to be advanced in support of the interpellation would be simply a repetition of those which had been published, and that by anticipating them he would be taking the wind out of the sails of the Extreme Left. It was a false move. By making many admissions which were not called for, he furnished his enemies with new weapons, which they did not fail to use with effect against him. He declared, for instance, that the policy which the Government had pursued in Africa was quite in harmony with that upheld by previous régimes. When M. Naquet's turn came to speak, he observed that had M. Ferry informed the Chamber, when he obtained its sanction to chastise the Kroumirs, that he was endeavouring to carry out the programme of the Empire and the Government of July, he would have received from an Assembly of Republicans a very different answer. The speaker who made the greatest mark during the debate was M. Clemenceau, M. Gambetta's supposed rival. The Radical Deputy for Montmartre never gave before such proofs of power as an orator. He seldom conveys the impression of being thoroughly in earnest when he speaks. That vein of sardonic humour, which is so inseparable from the man, is too often apt to raise a laugh at the expense of his dignity, while it is flattering to his wit. Arguments in the end are better than blows, and M. Clemenceau seems at last to have become aware of this. His speech on the Tunis question was caustic enough, and M. Ferry's irrepressible irritation during its delivery evinced; but it was also a triumph of dialectical skill. He chiefly dealt with the financing side of the Tunis business. He may not have succeeded in actually imperilling the honour of the Government by proving that financial companies' speculations had everything to do with its policy; but he conclusively showed that the Government had entangled itself with private enterprises in a manner altogether contrary to constitutional principles. M. Ferry, in a second speech, explained away a good deal, but it was impossible for him to prove that there had not been official favouritism of a somewhat compromising character. The debate lasted some days, and might have lasted until now had not M. Gambetta intervened. When the general discussion was closed all manner of resolutions were submitted by friends and opponents of the Government; but all failed to satisfy the House, and for two hours the most absolute confusion prevailed. M. Gambetta was sitting all the while in an adjoining room, but was kept well informed of what was passing by his numerous scouts. At length he thought the moment ripe for giving the world another proof of his ability as a ruler of men. As he entered the tumult immediately subsided, and as he ascended the orators' tribune the excitement was intense—incomprehensible to those who were not witnesses of it. His speech was brief, but full of political sagacity. He would not argue on any of the points which had been raised during the debate, but inasmuch as France had affixed her signature to the Bardo Treaty he declared it was the patriotic duty of Parliament to uphold its integral execution. He, therefore, moved a resolution to this effect, which was carried by 379 to 71 votes, thus giving 308 as the Government majority.

The four days' debate consequently ended in something like a fiasco. M. Gambetta listened to the wind and waves engaged in useless tempest until it was his pleasure to hold up his finger, when peace was immediately restored. Nothing could have more conclusively shown the reality of his dictatorship, which he himself repudiates. He starts on his new career with an overwhelming majority.

The chief result of the debate was to draw attention to the defects in the military organization, but there is so much to compress into this letter that I must leave the subject for the present.

The new Ministry is the all-important topic of the moment. It is well that I did not attempt to send you a conjectural Cabinet by the last mail, for had I done so I should have only shared the confusion of other prophets. Those who speculated on M. Gambetta's intentions of a fortnight since did not allow the probability of certain prominent men upon whom his eye rested declining to accept the honour he was disposed to proffer them, to enter sufficiently into their calculations. There is no doubt that his thoughts then turned on M. Challemel Lacour, M. de Freycinet, and M. Tissot, and probably M. Leon Say, to take portfolios in his Administration; but no one of these gentlemen was desirous of accepting the honour that might have been opened to them. Their motives are not difficult to understand. They are somebodies now, they would be virtually nobodies in M. Gambetta's Ministry. They had no desire to have their individuality destroyed by M. Gambetta's overwhelming personality. It was felt that from the necessity of things the new Cabinet must be a Cabinet of clerks under the absolute control of one dominating mind. The result has fully confirmed this belief. With the exception of M. Gambetta himself, and perhaps one or two other exceptions, the Executive is made up of obscure men. The Premier had to accept the portfolio of Foreign Affairs because M. de Freycinet saw that he could not work in harmony with the colleagues that would have been provided for him. Of the other members of the Ministry, only two formed part of the previous Administration, viz., M. Cochery (Posts and Telegraphs) and M. Cazot (Justice). Of the remaining Ministers, M. Paul Bert (Education and Public Worship) is the most eminent. His fame is divided between politics and surgery, especially in the department of vivisection. When he is not declaiming against all forms of religion and in favour of purely secular education, he is making experiments upon living dogs and monkeys at the Sorbonne, to the great distress of the neighbours, whose peace is disturbed by the howls of the victims. Deism is common in France, but Atheism is rare among educated men. M. Paul Bert, however, is an Atheist of the purest water, and glories in the fact. His force of character makes him a good speaker, and he has a hard but intellectual face. His anti-religious zeal is even greater than that of his predecessor, M. Jules Ferry, and the religious orders need not expect much mercy from him. If he had his will he would make a clean sweep of all forms of faith which claim a divine origin; but M. Gambetta, who accepts humanity as he finds it, will keep him in check. Nevertheless, there is a singular irony in the circumstance that such a man as M. Paul Bert should have been appointed to preside over the Department of Public Worship. The other new members of the Ministry, with the exception of M.M. Cazot and Cochery, are almost nonentities in the political world, unless journalism must be included in it. M. Spuller, chief editor of M. Gambetta's paper the République Française, has been made Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs. The post appears relatively insignificant, but in reality he will "shape the whisper" of the Republican throne more than any other man. In all practical matters he will be Foreign Minister, and the fidus Achates of his master, just as he has hitherto been in the editorial room of the Chaussée d'Antin. He is one of those cold-blooded intellectual men, who work quietly but surely, and do not allow their ambition to be seen. M. Allain-Targe, the new Minister of Finance, is another writer on the République Française, which he established in 1871, with MM. Gambetta, Brisson, and Challemel-Lacour. His name is identified with the policy of the purchase of the railways by the State—a project upon which M. Gambetta also has set his heart. The name of M. Waldeck-Rousseau is only known to those who have made a very close study of French politics. But he now succeeds M. Constans as Minister of the Interior. His claim to notice chiefly consists in his inveterate hostility to the principle of permanency in the magistracy. He is one among many youthful members of the Bar whose ambition has made them deputies. That a man of so little political weight should have been suddenly raised upon so high a pedestal shows that all who have sufficient confidence in themselves may hope to attain the highest distinction in a country where the cards of destiny are so strangely shuffled. M. Rouvier, Minister of Commerce, was about 11 years ago travelling for a commercial firm at Marseilles. A certain gift of speech, coupled with intense hatred of the Empire, brought him into notice. He is a master of the technicalities of commerce, and for this reason, and because he is a free trader, M. Gambetta presented him with a portfolio, in spite of the opposition of many advisers, including M. Brisson. The appointment naturally gives satisfaction to England, who feels that the chances of a renewal of the Treaty of Commerce with France are thereby increased. General Campenon, who succeeds General Farre as Minister of War, is a fine specimen of a French officer. He has served in the wars of Algeria, Italy, China, and finally during the Prussian invasion of 1870. He was wounded in the same engagement in which his chief, General Legrand, lost his life, and after the restoration of peace he made himself conspicuous in the work of re-organising the army. In addition to his military talents he is a very fair speaker. He will be expected to repair the blunders of General Farre, and carry the Tunisian campaign to a speedy issue. M. Gougeard, Minister of Marine, was quite unknown to the public when his name appeared on the Ministerial list. He has been a naval captain, and took part in the bombardment of Sebastopol. He has also written for the République Française on naval subjects, but has never made any figure in politics. For M. Antonin Proust, another member of the Française staff, a new office has been created, that of Fine Arts. It is merely an ornamental one. Another new department has been made for agriculture, and M. Deves is the Minister. M. Deves is an orator who on several occasions has made his mark in the Tribune, but there has been nothing in his career of a nature to prepare the public for his elevation to the rank of a Minister. The same remark applies with greater force to M. Raynal, who has received the portfolio of Public Works. He, however, took an active part in the national defence during the disastrous events of '70 and '71, and his services at that critical time are not forgotten.

It will be observed that the whole strength of M. Gambetta's Ministry rests with himself. It was evidently his wish that this should be so. Such a dictatorship was alone compatible with his character and the distance which removed him in the sense of statesmanlike capacity from every other politician with whom it would have been possible for him to work. His chief concern was to guard against internal dissensions in his Cabinet. It was of little importance that his Ministers should be men of brilliant abilities; what he chiefly desired among them was homogeneity. This end he has certainly attained by selecting as his subordinates men who have everything to gain by his friendship, and everything to lose by his enmity. The business of State will move like clockwork as far as the Ministry is concerned, but outside the charmed circle the waves of envy and hatred will surge continuously, and gather power probably as time goes on.

The Ministry was formed on the 14th, and on the following day M. Gambetta made his declaration in the presence of a Chamber crowded to suffocation. It was anything but the declaration of a fou furieux. That a man of so ardent a temperament should have expressed himself, at a moment when the whole country was eagerly awaiting the promulgation of his programme, in such vague and cautious terms goes far to prove that he has become a sincere convert to the policy of moderation. The Government, he said, proposed to remodel judicial institutions; to continue the work of national education, so well commenced by its predecessors; to resume the subject of military legislation; to endeavour, without impairing the national defences, to reduce the burden of taxation imposed by the land and sea forces; and without detriment to the finances to lighten the burden that weighed on agriculture; to fix by treaties the economic system of national industries and to promote production, export, and exchange; to aid provident institutions, and by a strict application of the concordat to ensure respect for the public authority in the relations of Church and State; lastly, to maintain order at home with firmness, and peace abroad with dignity.

This declaration was naturally applauded by the majority, but there were no signs of enthusiasm—in fact, it would be difficult to name any speech by M. Gambetta that failed so completely to stir the feelings of friends and foes.

MR. HENRY IRVING ON THE STAGE.

Mr. Henry Irving delivered the opening address of the session of the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution, in the Music Hall, Edinburgh, and spoke on "The Stage as It is." He maintained that no apology for the stage was needed. It had but to be named to be honoured. There never was so large a number of theatres or of actors as now; and their type was vastly improved by public recognition. As to dramatic reform, Mr. Irving said it was not needed; or if it was, all the reform that was wanted would be best effected by the operation of public opinion upon the administration of a good theatre. So far from managers forcing on the public either very good or very bad dramatic material, they really had not the will. They followed the public taste with the greatest keenness. If the people wanted Shakspeare, then they got Shakspeare. If they wanted Byron, Albery, Gilbert, Burnand, and Sullivan, then Byron, Albery, Gilbert, Burnand, and Sullivan they had. If they wanted Robertson, Robertson was there for them. If they desired opera-bouffe, depend upon it they would have it. Those who preferred the higher drama—in the representation of which his heart's best interests were centred—instead of querulously animadverting on managers who gave them something different, should, as Lord Beaconsfield said, "make themselves into a majority." If they did so, the higher drama would be produced. In continuing his discourse Mr. Irving observed that to boast of being able to appreciate Shakspeare more in reading him than in seeing him acted used to be a common method of affecting special intellectuality. But the pitiful delusion has mostly died out. It conferred a cheap badge of superiority on those who entertained it. It seemed to each of them an inexpensive opportunity of worshipping himself on a pedestal. But what did it amount to? It was little more than a conceited and feather-headed assumption that an unprepared reader, whose mind is usually full of far other things, will see on the instant all that has been developed in hundreds of years by the members of a studious and enthusiastic profession. Mr. Irving's own conviction is that there are few characters or passages of our great dramatists which will not repay original study. But at least, he continued, we must recognise the vast advantages with which a practised actor, impregnated by the associations of his life and by study—with all the practical and critical skill of his profession up to the date at which he appears—whether he adopts or rejects tradition, addresses himself to the interpretation of any great character, even if he have no originality whatever. There is something still more than this, however, in acting. Every one who has the smallest histrionic gift has a natural dramatic fertility; so that as soon as he knows the author's text and obtains self-possession, and feels at home in a part without being too familiar with it, the mere automatic action of rehearsing and playing it at once begins to place the author in new lights, and to give the personage being played an individuality partly independent of, and yet consistent with, and rendering more powerfully visible, the dramatist's conception. It is the vast power a good actor has in this way which has led the French to speak of creating a part when they mean its being first played; and French authors are so conscious of the extent and value of this co-operation of actors with them that they have never objected to the phrase, but, on the contrary, are uniformly lavish in their homage to the artists who have created on the boards the parts which they themselves have created on paper. Mr. Irving went on to observe that while there is but one Shakspeare, and there are but comparatively few dramatists sufficiently classic to be read with close attention, there is a great deal of average dramatic work excellently suited for representation. From this the public derive pleasure as well as instruction and mental stimulus. So it is plain that if, because Shakspeare is good reading, people were to give the cold shoulder to the theatre, the world would lose all the vast advantage which comes to it through the dramatic faculty in forms not rising to essentially literary excellence. As to the fear of moral contamination, the theatre of 50 years ago did sometimes need reforming in the audience part of the house. But it has been reformed; and if there is moral contamination from what is performed on the stage, so there is from books, so there may be at lawn-tennis, clubs, and at dances. But do we, therefore, bury ourselves? The theatre, as a whole, is never below the average moral sense of the time; and this is truer now than ever it was before. The stage is no longer a mere appendage of court life, but the property of the educated people. It must satisfy them or pine in neglect. This being so, the stage is no longer proscribed. Its members are no longer pariahs in society. Was his appearance in their town not a sign of that? He felt his position as a representative one, and it marked an epoch in the estimation in which the art he loved was held by the British world. Referring to the lament that there were no schools for actors, Mr. Irving said the complaint was idle. Practice was their school. They should have a sincere and absorbing sympathy with all that is good and great and inspiring. Mr. Irving went on to dwell on the adaptability of the theatre to the prevailing wants and taste of the time, and concluded with a fine peroration picturing the actor's pleasure in abandoning himself to his author's grandest flights of thought and noblest burst of emotional enthusiasm.

OUR TASMANIAN LETTER.

HOBART, DECEMBER 27.

To the average mainlander, summer heat and exhaustion appear inevitable; returning January and February bring in their train the series of weather trials and accompanying vexations from which the approach of springtime alone seems to afford any prospect of relief. "Heat must be borne," is the answer to complaints, "like many another source of discomfort, as best it may." Such are the words of your sound theoretical philosopher who, taking things as they are, considers how he may best fortify his mind against them. But what is the advice of your perhaps specious, but at any rate practical philosopher? "Don't make up your mind to 'grin and bear it,' but rather look around for some loophole of escape." Just so; and you sun-baked, wearied Sydneyites give your hands to our last-cited monitor, and listening a little further to his teachings, cease your complainings, put aside your contrivances for lessening the effects of the warmth, and with the hard cash thereby spared get return tickets to Launceston for one month or two months, as the depth of purses and the limits of leisure may dictate. In such a course lies the avenue of escape from present ills; and lest you should hesitate to fly from these for fear of meeting greater ones, let the voice of experience tell you that a trip to Tasmania in the summer has very few troubles and abundant rewards. It leaves, in short, to those of moderate means nothing to be desired. Your Englishman, in the severe season, collects his family, picks up his duds, steps plurally aboard a Havre packet, and is quickly amidst the delights of the milder continental climate and the invigorating influences of change of scene and lack of business cares. And why should the Australian content himself with casting, in fancy, a wistful eye upon his Home compeer, saying, "Exactly what I would do if I were there?" Why does he not, like a sensible man, take Tasmania as his France, the Rhine, and Switzerland, combined, and Launceston or Hobart as his Havre, or Calais, or Dieppe?

The fact is, mainlanders as a rule don't know Tasmania; they associate a trip to the island with vague discomforts of travelling, a long distance, doubtful hotel accommodation, and little to pay them for their pains when all preliminaries shall have been safely tided over. Now, it shall be my business to show that the imagined difficulties of transit are fancies only, and that any idea of disappointment being experienced on arrival in Tasmania simply proceeds from lack of information concerning the tight little island. A bold statement is this last, you say. As any one of your Sydney folk who has visited Tasmania in January can say whether or not the game was worth the candle, the writer will confidently abide the issue.

Well, first as to transit. Your tourist with a month's holiday in view, doesn't need to be told how easy and cheap it is to get to Melbourne. Once there, if he has studied the plain timetables, he has only to wait for a matter of hours before he sets foot on one of the steamers which frequently leave Queen's Wharf for Launceston or Hobart. Within a week after leaving Sydney our friend may find himself luxuriating in the cool, fern-embowered gullies of Mount Wellington, or gaining new strength from the southerly sea breezes, blowing chiefly from the wide ocean near by. But this is anticipating. To go back a little. Our traveller may leave Melbourne by a T. S. N. boat for Launceston, in which case he will be about 23 hours on the water; or he may take passage to Hobart either by a T. S. N. boat or by one of the N. S. S. steamers which call at Hobart on the way to New Zealand. The choice of route depends entirely upon individual predilections; for bad sailors Launceston is the best place of landing, whilst for those who enjoy the briny the trip along the east coast of the island presents many features of interest, showing some of the finest scenery of the rugged, bold type that can be met with on Australian coasts. Most people, however, elect to cross the Straits direct to Launceston, and proceed thence by rail to Hobart. Of course, if it be preferred, steam may be taken direct from Sydney to Hobart; but the vessels do not run very frequently on this line, and the trips are generally tedious and long.

Arrived in Tasmania, the visitor may abandon himself to pleasure. Most mainlanders hurry away from Launceston by express for Hobart immediately on landing, giving no time to the Northern capital. I shall presently show that there are very numerous objects of attraction in the north of the island, but as our visitor's wish is to get as far south, and consequently as far away from the heat as possible, we will drive with him from the wharf to the main line railway-station, where he will usually find the express waiting for the passengers per steamer; the regular hour of departure is 3 o'clock. Hobart is about 130 miles distant by rail from Launceston, and the express seldom arrives before 9 p.m. The trip is rather shaky, for the main line, having been built cheaply by an English company, possesses the least possible degree of stability consistent with absolute freedom from danger. But the country through which the line passes is for the most part exceedingly beautiful. No sooner is Ben Lomond with its 5000 feet high summit lost in the cloudy expanse than fresh ranges of mountains and valleys, clothed with trees and verdure, or anon stretches of parklike country delight the eye by their alternating variety, whilst over all nature lingers the green beauty of springtime, not yet merged into summer; the traces of winter coolness and freshness not yet dried up by heat—contrasts most pleasing to the mainland glance. In Hobart, hotels and boarding-houses of all grades from the 30s. a week to the six guineas abound, and visitors have no trouble in finding habitations. The visitors are looked forward to annually by Hobartonians with that kind of intense satisfaction which occurs when we have something to gain from a transaction. And by-the-bye, let the unwary visitor take heed; let him understand that he is looked upon as fair game just as much as he would be at one of your own watering places. Intercolonial visitors, like Christmas, come but once a year, and when they come bring good cheer in the shape of well-lined pocket-books, and Hobartonian hotelkeepers are not slow to prove their acquaintance with this fact.

"But what of the weather?" will be asked. Well of course if people here, as some really do, expecting to experience the coldness of midwinter, they will be grievously disappointed. If, however, they prepare to wear their ordinary winter or spring clothing; to be able to go out walking all through the day with comfort and pleasure; to feel chilly towards evening, and glad occasionally of a fire; to roll snugly amongst the blankets at night, after the delightful fashion of winter at home; in short to act in January and February as they might during August and September in New South Wales—supposing I say that they have these reasonable expectations, they will think the Hobart climate perfection. Once in a way we may have a warm day, when one feels the air oppressive, but such an event is a rarity, as may be guessed from the general complainings evoked from the half-indignant islanders. In the way of seeing lovely scenery and taking trips, the opportunities from Hobart are simply boundless, or rather are bounded only by the visitor's purse. Come with me first to Mount Wellington. Within three miles of the city, along a winding road, which, in its gradual ascent, rivals such beauties as of lake scenery, showing the broad Derwent winding amongst green fields and house-dotted hills until it spreads into the wide mountain-locked bay in front of the city, the mountain air makes its invigorating presence felt. Soon you seem to drive beneath Mount Wellington, which towers over 4000 feet above; the way leads on between grand old summits, and at length the tiny hostelry at the Fern Tree comes in view. From this point on foot you quickly gain the Bower, and begin to climb up the gully towards the Springs. A stream which forms the main source of the city water supply courses down the Bower Gully, and as you clamber over fallen moss-covered trunks the mountain sides rise on either hand in masses of verdure, whilst above the far-reaching pendant fronds of the great tree-ferns screen the sunlight and ensure that delicious coolness which is the greatest of all charms upon hot days. If inclined you may pursue your path to the Springs, half-way up the mountain, or even go on to the plateau which forms the summit where, standing on marvellous volcanic productions, you can glance on a fine day over a vast expanse of lovely country, seeing meanwhile city in miniature the thousands of feet below. Again, you may take steamer and go a dozen miles up the Derwent to New Norfolk, with its strawberry fields, hop gardens, and salmon ponds; or you may make a trip down the river to Bruin Island, or go fishing, or join in moonlight picnicing excursions across the river; or drive to half-a-dozen pretty localities, where everything seems a thing of beauty. But after all, the main attraction of Hobart is the coolness; our other attractions we simply "throw in."

And now let us be returning to Sydney. We take express to Launceston, and if we are wise, do not immediately board the waiting Melbourne steamer. The prosperity of the colony is chiefly dependent upon the northern or newer part of the island. Here most of the mines exist. Launceston is, indeed, the headquarters of the gold and tin mining which have suddenly raised the colony to so unwonted a pitch of prosperity, and added half a million a year to our exports. Anyone who wishes to combine business with pleasure in the Tasmanian trip should, making Launceston the headquarters, go to Beaconsfield, Lefroy, Gladstone, and other places within easy reach at which the mines have produced with mushroom-like rapidity considerable populations and thriving trade. The great Bischoff tin mine, which pays about £8 a year on its £1 shares, and also the numerous new tin ventures on the West Coast, may be reached conveniently from here. As regards natural attractions, Launceston is by no means deficient. The drives to Cora Lynn, over the Cataract, and towards Georgetown, have the beauties of English scenery—the low hills of Devonshire come insensibly to one's mind, whilst driving between the hawthorn and quickset hedges and amongst home-like farms and orchards.

When the visitor at last steps aboard the Melbourne steamer, and takes his last impressions of Tasmanian scenery from the varying banks of the Tamar along its 40-miles course, he must perforce admit that he has been in a delightful summer country, where abounding natural beauties are enhanced by a lovely health-restoring climate, and where the people, notedly of a kindly and social turn of mind, have spared no effort in private capacities to make their intercolonial friends happy, and to furnish artificial pleasures on a scale befitting the profusion with which nature has dealt with the island colony.

SHIPMENTS OF FROZEN AUSTRALIAN PRODUCE.

The following special circular issued by the London office of the New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Co. has been handed to us for publication:—

FROZEN MEAT.

In view of the development of this industry, the successful importation of frozen meat from Australia having been already practically secured, it is desirable that in order to its satisfactory disposal in this market great care and attention should be paid in carrying out the details attendant on the operation, not only as regards slaughtering, quality, weight, freezing, and preparation for shipment, but with respect to stowage in frozen chambers of vessel, and time of arrival here. On these points the following remarks may prove of service:—

(a.) Slaughtering, quality, and weight ought to be such as to suit the requirements of the London market, the butchering being performed by experts conversant therewith. These wants will best be met by the observance of the following rules:—Beef: Care ought to be taken not to score the meat in flaying; the carcass ought to be sawn, not chopped through the chine, thus separating the sides with least injury to the bone; for this operation a bow meat saw should be used. Bullocks compact in frame and in good condition to weigh when dead from 680 to 800 lb. ought to be selected. If attention be paid in the separation of the body, that there is no injury to the chine or backbone, the meat may be sent in sides rather than in quarters, but if in the handling of the sides before being frozen there is any probability of injury by abrasure, the meat ought to be cut into quarters. Sides, if delivered in perfect order, will yield a better outturn per lb., than if separated into fore and hind quarters, but in the transfer from place of production to this market it may be difficult to secure the needful care in manipulation to attain the desired end. Sheep ought all to be wethers or maiden ewes; ought to be carefully skinned without "scoring" carcase; ought not to be cut through the "aitches," but the breast bones may be divided, the knobs of the kidneys with the suet and the shanks being removed. Condition must be uniformly good. Merino sheep should weigh from 56lb. to 64lb., the latter weight being preferred, and crossbred sheep from 64lb. to 80lb.; the meat of the crossbred will generally command here a more ready sale than that of merino sheep.

(b.) Freezing, Preparation for Shipment, and Stowage in Vessel.—Before being put under the freezing process the meat, whether beef or mutton, must be thoroughly cooled in a cooling chamber, at a temperature of, say 40 degrees Fahrenheit. According to the time of year, locality, and weight of meat dealt with must depend the interval allowed to elapse between killing and freezing, but probably 48 hours will be found amply sufficient for the purpose. If strict attention to the cooling be not observed, the effect of freezing meat too freshly killed will be to cause decay to commence at the bone. If after being frozen the meat be for some time exposed to a temperature above freezing point before being put in the freezing chamber of export vessel it may be seriously injured. Should there be no special means for its conveyance in a frozen state from the freezing house on shore to the vessel the transit ought to be short and quick. Each quarter or side of beef and carcase of mutton, after being duly, but not too severely frozen and properly covered with calico, ought to be conveyed to the freezing chamber on board ship. If that be situated above the water load line of the vessel (a position which should, if possible, be avoided), care should be taken that the meat does not come into such close contact with the sides of the chamber as to prevent free circulation of air. It has been found that the sun's rays, in the passage through the tropics, have been sufficiently powerful so to raise the temperature in the walls of the chamber as to affect the meat stowed above the level of the water line and placed in contact with the sides of the chamber. In every case, the meat, whether beef or mutton, ought to be stowed "athwart" and not "fore and aft" ship; in the case of sheep, the carcases being laid with the legs next the sides of the chamber, the temperature of which ought, in case of accident to freezing apparatus, to be maintained as nearly as possible at 26° Fahrenheit. The mark and shipping weight of each side or quarter of beef or carcase of mutton ought to be attached thereto in order to facilitate identification of interests and comparison of shipping and sale weights.

(c.) Time of Arrival.—When more extended experience of the intrinsic merits of Australasian beef and mutton shall have been gained in this country, and the appliances requisite for the storage here of large quantities in frozen chambers shall have been secured, the question of time of arrival will become somewhat less important than it is under existing conditions. Speaking generally, it may be stated that frozen meat reaching this market between December and August will meet a more ready and satisfactory sale than if the arrivals take place between September and November. Throughout the latter period there is not only less demand but supplies of domestic meat and those from various centres of production on the Continent are larger, and with these Australasian shipments must necessarily compete. As it is not always possible, even under favourable conditions of market, to arrange the discharge from ship on the days on which the Metropolitan Meat Market is most largely attended, it will be desirable to secure, if possible, a minimum of ten lay days for the unloading at this port. Care ought, therefore, to be taken to obtain this concession in making arrangements for shipping.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The transport of Australasian butter and cheese as part of mixed cargoes having hitherto been attended with loss by reason of heating on passage, it has been rightly considered that the introduction of freezing and cool chambers on board steamers and sailing vessels carrying such cargoes may overcome this difficulty. With regard to the former article of produce there seems no reason why it should not be subjected to a freezing process as severe as that hitherto found to be requisite in the case of meat. Butter may, therefore, if necessary, be fitly sent in the same frozen chamber, care being taken that before shipment it is in thoroughly good condition and quite sweet. It may be packed in casks containing 112lb., or in firkins containing 56lb., or in tins containing 28lb. each, the variety of package being suggested so as to meet various consumptive requirements. It appears to be matter for practical investigation by the producer, however, whether the chemical properties inherent in cheese will admit of its being successfully dealt with in the same way. Were it possible to convey cheese from the colonies to this market at a temperature a little over freezing point, if of good quality at time of shipment, it would doubtless reach this country in condition fit for sale, but it is open to question whether continuous exposure to a temperature of from 6 to 7 degrees under freezing point might not sensibly detract from its satisfactory disposal. Under these circumstances, if producers in the colonies cannot fairly test the result of the article being placed under a freezing process before shipment, as regards appearance and taste, or cannot ensure that while on passage the cheese, though not shipped as ordinary cargo, and therefore liable to be sweated, can be stowed in a cool but not freezing chamber, it will be prudent that experimental shipments should be made on a very limited scale only, in the frozen chambers fitted up for the conveyance of meat. When shipped, the cheeses ought to be as uniform in make and flavour as possible, weighing, each, from 50lb. to 60lb., and packed as the American Cheddar cheeses sent here for sale are packed, one in a box, surrounded by a little sawdust.

THE Presbyterian clergymen of Cleveland, United States, have been discussing the propriety of furnishing the manuscripts of their sermons on Sunday evening for publication in the Monday papers. A diversity of opinion exists on the subject. Some of the ministers hold that the publication of religious discourse is akin to preaching, and therefore that suitable preparation for their appearance the following day is a perfectly legitimate employment of the Sabbath. Others are willing to furnish their manuscripts to the papers after midnight, or upon condition that they shall not be put in type until after midnight.

The STATE RELATIONS, ORGANIZATION, and MANAGEMENT of HOSPITALS.

The following is the text of the paper read by Dr. Belgrave at a recent meeting of the New South Wales Branch of the British Medical Association, the discussion on which was adjourned to a special meeting to be called soon after the holidays:—

In the sphere of social administration in England and several of her chief colonies, the management of institutions for the treatment of the sick and wounded has long been a source of chagrin and perplexity to the philanthropic, of humiliation to the medical profession, and of disgust to the public. In several of the continental countries of Europe all hospitals, properly so called, are under the control and direction of an executive department. In England, omitting the Poor Law infirmaries, neither central nor local government authorities exercise official control, though, in cases where subsidies are granted, the wishes and good opinion of both powers are eagerly sought for; and, practically, they possess a decisive influence, if they choose to exert it, in the determination of any important point in either domestic or financial arrangements. The facility with which tradesmen and contractors can make use of positions in the directorate for the purpose of indirectly promoting their own special interests, together with certain other financial circumstances, have become so notorious that both the Home and Colonial Governments feel the necessity for careful inspection and some supervision. It cannot, however, be said that either in England or in any of her colonies, the idea has as yet been fully apprehended, nor its contingent responsibilities accepted. It is probable that in England, the Charity Commissioners' labours will some day publicly reveal what is now only generally suspected, with the result that hospitals will be placed under official inspection; the duties of the inspectors not being confined to details of domestic management, but to extend also to the ordinary expenditure of hospitals and the disposition of their capital, whether consisting in money, landed or any other kind of property. It is not necessary for the purpose of my present task to much further advert to this branch of the subject. I may, however, be permitted to record the conviction I entertain—that if in England the State had fulfilled its duty in connection with the older royal and other foundations in London, their resources would in the present day be nearly equal to the modern burdens properly devolving on them. Unhappily, neither the sacred obligations of charity, the pitiable necessities of the helplessly sick and wounded, nor the remembrance of the dear and just claims the country has on every son of its soil, have availed to fully secure to the grand national hospitals of London the ample endowments appropriated to them by the charity and wisdom of antecedent generations. The generous heart cognisant of the mean devices resorted to for the purpose of legally robbing these noble charities of a portion of their funds, almost repines at the abounding prosperity of a community which has practically condoned this state of things by its indifference and inactivity. I would also fain pass by without allusion the principles which should regulate provision for the maintenance of hospitals; but the subject in this colony, at least, does not safely admit this avoidance. The sentiment of charity, like other beneficent spiritual forces, is apt to languish if not duly exercised; and as the hospital service of a country affords the most potent and useful means for keeping alive and vigorous this divine feeling, it would be a mistake, from a purely statesman's point of view, for the Government to exclusively undertake the duty, as such a course would obviously remove a most powerful motive for its exercise. This fact has been noticed by observant, travelled statesmen; and Guizot among them was not singular in expressing the admiration he felt at the spectacle presented by the people of England in their voluntary assumption of a duty elsewhere almost exclusively performed by the State. In addition to its evil negative influence in restraining the cultivation of the spirit of charity, the maintenance by Government of all hospitals is demoralizing in the extreme in its influence on the bulk of the people, who thereby seem to lose a principal motive in life for the exercise of forethought, prudence, and self-reliance. Its evil tendency, moreover, in the same direction on educated people is extremely remarkable. It has also the additional very serious disadvantage of removing from the majority of the households of the people one of the chief natural chastening and reformatory influences on individuals and families. When a paternal Government assumes the duty of making provision for all the sick poor, it becomes a habit with people, in the event of illness or accident occurring in their families, to shunt their natural duties on the State; the result being that their own moral sensibilities become blunt. The feeling of mutual responsibility among relations in circumstances of bodily danger thus gradually diminishes or dies out; and even family affection—the great cohesive force of social life—itself becomes enfeebled. How many an errant son is, in British communities, rescued on a sick-bed from the path of uselessness and dishonour to the duties of his station by the consciousness of an unmerited forgiveness and the feelings engendered by the tenderness and personal devotion of relations, when life may be hanging on the balance of a thought, and such vigilance, endurance of labour, and fatigue as usually spring alone from affection. In addition to these considerations, there exist others equally conclusive against the exclusively official assumption of the duty I refer to. These relate chiefly to the surprising tendency to redundancy in growth of a Government hospital system, and to the infinitely greater mortality inevitably incidental to the treatment of a large number of sick persons under one roof. There exist further certain political reasons which many lamentable occurrences in the old world have long since shown the force of, against a system of pure State hospitals. If an epidemic of great severity breaks out in a country where the hospital is a State institution, the Government is often held responsible by the ignorant populace for the visitations of Providence; and in several instances military force has alone been found equal to quell the emergency thus created. In countries, however, where natural responsibility is not interfered with, each man feels his own share under such circumstances, and submissively co-operates with the authorities in combatting the unseen but merciless enemy. Untravelled English people have no conception of the dimensions to which this difficulty may attain; and it is important that in this colony, where there appears to be rising a tendency to saddle the State with the duty of succouring all the sick poor, this grave disadvantage of the system should become known. Moreover, there should never be absent from our mind the ominous facts noticed by critics with reference to the growth of the workhouse infirmaries in England. Taken in conjunction with the segregation of congenital pauper children, it is evident a very large proportion of the population are from the cradle to the grave living in the conviction, and with the habits naturally springing therefrom, that they, the children of the State par excellence, are sure to be provided for, whatever may betide the rest of the world; hence much of the listlessness, idleness, want of thrift and energy, and absolute indifference to the future, which characterise an increasing proportion of the population of the United Kingdom. I think that few minds can contemplate this subject and the obvious ultimate outcome of such undisputed widely increasing demoralization without feeling that herein indeed exists a vital—because socially molecular danger, to English pre-eminence. It constitutes, in fact, an arbitrary interference with the natural law of the survival of the fittest, virtually substituting for this latter the survival of the least fit at the sacrifice of the more fit. Impulses of humanity and religion, and the sense of a common danger in connection with infectious disease, prompt civilised populations to concerted action in providing for the poor suffering from grave disease and serious accident. This, however, may be accomplished without compromising the morals of a people. As regards the colony of New South Wales, with its peculiar moral and social circumstances, and almost total absence of endowment, whether the offspring of charity or legislative foresight, the question is—what are the safe limits of connection between hospital charities and the State? I believe the principle underlying the arrangement actually obtaining in this colony, viz., that the State contribute in equal proportion to the public, is the correct one. The fact that the system has apparently acted as a deterrent to the public subscriptions in the case of the greatest Sydney hospital charity does not disprove either the wisdom or expediency of the plan, inasmuch as other circumstances have been the efficient cause of this result. These circumstances are the peculiar connection of the State with the Infirmary, which renders it incumbent on the latter to receive all "police sick cases" and destitute sick people who may be sent in by the authorities, the Government making a stipulated payment for each case. The practical effect of this system is that the institution is regarded by the public mainly in the light of a "Government institution"—a sort of adjunct to the Police Department. The arrangement, moreover, is so profitable and convenient to the Infirmary authorities that it acts as a damper on the zeal of the collector, and in great measure removes from the committee the necessity to puzzle their brains touching "Hospital Sundays," sermons, collections, balls, concerts, bazaars, meetings, races, lotteries, and the thousand and one devices familiar to good secretaries and active committeemen, for replenishing an empty exchequer. Under the chilling influence of the "pauper contract" a ridiculous feeling has arisen that it is infra dig. to resort to the usual means for raising funds. "Such methods are unbefitting a State hospital, however they may become the smaller institutions," is not an uncommon remark when any unusually zealous philanthropist or energetic lady undertakes anything of the kind. To free the Sydney hospitals proper from this incubus on their free action, I submit that no pro rata payment should be allowed in addition to the Parliamentary contribution of pound per pound; the latter ought to be accepted as sufficient consideration for attendance on Government patients really eligible for admission on the ground of severity of illness or accident. The other and more numerous cases sent from the Colonial Secretary's and the police offices—viz., those suffering from delirium tremens, extreme drunkenness, the subjects of undefined illness, occurring through wilful self-abandonment and personal neglect—might all, with infinitely greater and more permanent advantage, be provided for in two specially designed reformatories, one for each sex. The subjects for such an institution are unhappily in Sydney so numerous that my experience in the Sydney Infirmary would warrant the conclusion that if established, and containing 100 beds each, they would be filled in a month. At the present time the Sydney Infirmary is availed of by the majority of these characters simply as a temporary refuge to enable them to recover from one debauch, and prepare them to enter on another. The knowledge of this fact by the public, moreover, deters not a few from subscribing to the Infirmary, who rightly maintain that the admission of such cases is an abuse of charity, and a direct encouragement to intemperance and its consequences. No doubt the establishment of such a reformatory would require a distinct Act of Parliament to define its scope and bring the objects of its care under the control of the law. Reformatories of this kind might be made in a large degree contributory to their own support by undertaking laundry work for the Sydney hospitals, tailoring and other work for certain asylums, schools, &c. Their functions would be—first, to restore the inmates to bodily health; secondly, to improve their morals and furnish a knowledge of some suitable work in cases where such does not exist, and to establish habits of industry. A considerable proportion of these persons, if detained in such an institution sufficiently long to purify their bodies of the alcohol with which they are usually saturated and to establish a knowledge and habit of work and some love of method and order, might by suitable subsequent disposition, such as insistance on their residing in a temperance township, finding work for them before discharge, &c., be in encouraging degree reclaimed. At present, these unfortunates pass their time alternately in the Infirmary and gaol, remaining out during short intervals, spreading disease, contaminating the young, entailing on their relatives and friends incredible losses, anxiety, and humiliation, and extending the already, in this particular, exceptionally evil reputation of the colony. Their cost in hospital and gaol is now by reason of their number and irreclaimability at present very large: and it would surely be more economical to build two reformatories for such cases than to construct additional prisons and hospitals which a continuance of the practice of consigning them to Darlinghurst or the Infirmary must soon render inevitable. The amount the Infirmary receives from the objectionable source would soon be more than recouped by the additional subscriptions arising from increased public favour, and the more versatile exercise of collecting zeal on the part of the committee. The reformatories, moreover, might conveniently and advantageously be utilized for the medical and moral treatment of patients suffering from certain contagious diseases, and who are found in general hospitals to be an unmitigated nuisance, except in those establishments which are sufficiently spacious to admit of their complete isolation, and where their presence is indispensable to the completeness of a medical school. I am aware that in Sydney, Government is contributing more than half the cost of the construction of the two principal hospitals. Those who doubt the wisdom, nay, the duty of this course, have only to visit some other colonies, say Canada, and observe the state of their hospitals and of medical science. A very superficial inspection would suffice to convince any candid mind that though there exist 11 medical schools in that country, a population of four millions, and very many hospitals, that as regards medical science—in its practice among the rich equally as among the poor—the Dominion is amazingly behind the age. In the splendid city of Montreal—almost unsurpassed by any city in Britain of corresponding size for the magnificence of its churches and the beauty of its private residences—the "principal (?) hospital" is situated in a back street, and is little better than a barn, the management being strictly under the rule of the Rev. Mr. Stiggins, and its nursing staff rigorously presided over by Sairey Gamp and Betsy Prig; the edifice itself being strongly suggestive of that subtle condition palpable chiefly to the olfactory sense, but too well known to science as "hospitalism." It is true that at the time I visited the city—now seven years ago—there existed another well-built hospital in a remote suburb; but it belonged exclusively to the Roman Catholic section of the community; was managed by the "Grey Sisters;" and a feeling—far other than one of zeal for the advancement of medical science—animated its counsels, and swayed the judgment of its managers. Though the revenues of this institution are derived from the soil; have been secured to it by a sentiment of justice and magnanimity on the part of a conquering Protestant nation; and the destiny of the country is irrevocably linked with the fate of Protestant England, the wants of this hospital would, in the estimation of managers, be polluted by the ministrations of a Protestant doctor. In Sydney, thanks to the discernment of politicians, the prudent liberality of Parliament, and the sense of a great and practically limitless danger taught us by at least ten years' experience in connection with the old "Rum Hospital," this city bids fair to be better supplied in the matter of hospital provision than any city in the world. As both the central and suburban hospitals are to be clinical schools in connection with the University of Sydney; and from the circumstance that the pupils of the town institution can reach the lecture halls by the tram way as readily as those from the Alfred Hospital, Parliament will not really depart from its pound for pound principle of endowment by voting money for the completion of the two edifices in excess of what has been given by the public. The apparent anomaly is explained and justified by the educational (technical, or rather, professional) exigencies of the colony; and the public, now thoroughly aroused to a sense of its necessities in this respect, have lately given abundant evidence of wish that this want should be systematically and fully provided for by Parliament. And as regards this particular development of the educational question, all thoughtful persons must recognise that by supporting hospitals for the indigent, and encouraging the highest professional culture on the part of medical practitioners and students, the rich derive equal advantages with the poor, as the skill which is cultivated by placing every attainable appliance and remedy at the service of the hospital surgeon or physician becomes ultimately available by the rich in their inevitable hour of trial. This priceless advantage is too often lost sight of. Had it ever occurred to Count Cavour, the great Italian statesman, to lay siege to the more than Papal tyranny and ecclesiastical conservatism which characterized the management of the Italian hospitals and schools of his day, his precious life might not have been sacrificed by adhesion to the antiquated doctrines of phlebotomy. The comparative absence of national or religious jealousy in the management of the Sydney hospitals, and the wise liberality of our Parliament, have been equally advantageous to the interests of the wealthy as of the poor sick. The community of interests really sustained by various classes of society in the efficiency of the local institutions is a fact which ought never to be lost sight of in connection with the hospital question. The rich and influential in consorting for the welfare of the sick poor are literally making provision for their own future needs. For the successful management of a general hospital, certain structional arrangements are indispensable. The objects of these is to facilitate supervision, promote discipline, self-respect, and happiness among the nurses, order and cleanliness among the patients, with protection from infection and contagion; and to enable the various professional duties to be performed at a minimum expenditure of time and muscular exertion. It is certain that if the quarters of the medical officers on house duty are situated in the most distant part of the building, the functions of these gentlemen will be performed in the most perfunctory manner; and the death-roll of the institution not be susceptible of favourable comment. As regards the individual sufferings of the inmates of an hospital so circumstanced, who could tell the tale? Again, if the dwellings of the nurses are not detached from the main structure, how fare discipline and cleanliness? The frowsy smell of the little closet apartments at the entrance to some wards in certain London hospitals, are suggestive of the surprising tenacity of life of Mrs. Gamp, even in these enlightened days. Some of our members on whom the fearful responsibilities of their vocation have not stamped out all memory of their student days, may recall to mind the dangers resulting from the want of separate accommodation for nurses when off duty. As the practice of medicine is necessarily surrounded by doubt and uncertainty, and an error—in reference, for example, to the diagnosis of communicable diseases—may lead to remote consequences far exceeding in importance the worst that could happen to the first patient, it is obvious that there should exist means for isolating, without practically disturbing, any inmate in whom, for example, such an infectious condition as erysipelas might be suspected. If this provision be not made, surgeons will resist the removal of suspicious cases until there be no room for doubt, with the result, of course, of jeopardizing the sanitary state of the ward, and the lives of the inmates. The design of every hospital I have seen has been more or less in straight lines; and, with the exception of the Sydney University or Alfred Hospital, I have not seen one furnished with the proper but simple and facile appliances for saving labour, which would naturally occur to a physician in designing a hospital. The circular form of ward may have drawbacks, which experience may reveal; but I believe it would in practice be found to reduce the labour of nursing to a minimum, and immensely facilitate general management. The management of hospitals is a subject well worthy of more careful consideration than it has hitherto received. The conduct of the great London hospitals is at once a scandal to the country, and a reflection on the fair fame of the London population. If the system had been expressly designed to facilitate malfeasance, conceal wrong, and reduce the utility of the benefactions of founders to a minimum, it could not have been more successful. A "grand committee" is a most convenient instrument for bamboozling the public, and securing the protection of influential persons in seasons of political danger, and in the event of assault incurred by professional misfortune or shortcomings. It constitutes a buffer—whose efficiency the initiated can well testify to—between a culpable administration and an angry public. It can serve no really useful purpose, but acts as a cloak to abuse of funds, excuses the obstinate maintenance of all sorts of errors in organization and the details of duty, and deprives public opinion of the influence which legitimately belongs to it over the conduct of such institutions; the morally pachydermatous character of "grand committees," rendering them practically impervious to public influence. As regards New South Wales, the plan of having a moderate-sized committee, one third being nominated by Government, and a fifth retiring annually, ineligible for re-election for three years, would be found to meet all requirements, providing, of course, the medical element be sufficiently represented. Unless a proportion be compelled to retire periodically, and for a sufficiently long term, there is danger that the institution may become the prey of a clique, more intent on indirect business advantages than on the recovery of patients and the promotion of the medical sciences. The action of a central charity board of control appointed by Government would, with the assisted action of the regulation requiring the retirement for a period of three years of a few directors, effectually prevent any of the gross abuses which have characterised the management of so many hospitals in the British Empire. One of the most fruitful sources of contention and unpleasantness in large hospitals is the too-frequently undefined relative positions and duties of the secretary, superintending nurse, and doctors. During recent years in England the principle of selecting a resident superintendent from the ranks of the medical profession has been often adopted, and with the most satisfactory results. In the United States of America and in several countries on the continent of Europe, it appears to have been the rule for many years. It is surprising that so obviously suitable an arrangement has not been adopted in Sydney. The duties of the position are of such a character, involve the necessity for such varied technical knowledge, and so much special experience, that it is unreasonable to expect they can be fulfilled by a layman, however well-informed, active, and accustomed to command. It was in former days thought the best superintendents of lunatic asylums were smart men of business, and the tendency all the world over even now is to shunt this duty on laymen. Fortunately, for the most part, governing bodies and official authorities are fully impressed with the conviction that medical training is indispensable to the position; and hence when the office fails in its functions its occupant is made responsible; so should it be in regard to the conduct of general hospitals. In London, the treasurers of some of the largest hospitals virtually fill the position; and notwithstanding their many personal advantages, results are eminently unsatisfactory. The chief objects of their solicitude are evidently the lands and property of the charity; and it really appears as if the intrusion of these gentlemen on the professional function was attributable to necessities of a character not susceptible of too inquisitive inquiry, which might become inevitable if the charity being superintended by a medical man, were to be pushed to its extreme of usefulness; and hence its resources utilised to the last pound. The devotion of all honourably available resources to the purposes of the hospital would not admit of letting farms to favoured tenants at inadequate rents; would compel the drainage and improvement of lands, and as sharp and just an eye kept on household property as if it belonged to a private individual. I can understand the conservatism of the grand committees and treasurers of the "Bethlehem" and Royal General Hospitals of London. It has, however, so acted in discouragement of private hospital endowment in every part of the British empire that the time has long since come for the profession to assert its rights and fulfil its duties in the matter. I think the press has not neglected the subject, but the zeal and courage of the fourth estate are not alone sufficient to grapple with so subtle a question. When "grand committees" seek to carry out administrative details through the medium of numerous sub-committees, the results are ludicrous, and lead to disastrous confusion and a great waste in material resources. Such committees are perpetually floundering in imagined difficulties, and not unfrequently become completely stuck in a mud of fiction, where a responsible medical man would find clear water and safe sailing. The medical superintendent of an hospital is the administrative head, and through his intermediary a managing board can be kept thoroughly informed as regards the details of every department. Without such an officer a board necessarily works in the dark; and neglect of duty, abuse of trust, professional inefficiency, inadequacy of appliances, the presence in dangerous degree of infectious disease, and numerous other defects are liable to be overlooked, until they have become notoriously conspicuous. In institutions where there is no medical superintendent, there is no weekly medical report to the managing committee, hence fever, pyæmia, and erysipelas may get a firm hold in the establishment before the fact is even perceived. Of course each physician or surgeon would be acquainted with any such occurring in his particular ward; but, as these do not visit at the same hour, and hence have but accidental opportunities for inter-communication, and usually carefully avoid inquiries into their colleagues' cases unless specially invited, it is clear several wards may become the seat of typhoid, pyæmic, scarlatinal, or other poison without the knowledge of the committee. It may be said that such an occurrence would be noticed by the nurses, and reported by them to the Board. It might, but too late. What is necessary is that such an invasion should be known by the management in time to check its extension, and that could only be by a medical man having a knowledge of what is going on in every ward. The youthful resident medical officers hitherto employed in some establishments might be expected to report such an occurrence; and I have known them to do it, but without their communication receiving either the credit or attention it merited. As a rule it can scarcely be said that these young gentlemen are recruited in colonies, not enjoying the advantages of a medical school, from among the most laborious and zealous of our profession; and hence their representations are liable to receive less consideration than their intrinsic importance may entitle them to. Moreover, their too frequent la-da-da peculiarities, romantic notions of their own dignity, uncorrected by the sobering experiences of independent life, and the fact that they too often practically typify the hyperæsthetical, superæsthetical flummery heroes of the "Queen's naves" are circumstances that evidently render it ridiculous to expect from them any such solid services and anxious zeal as are required in a real "medical superintendent." As a matter of fact these young gentlemen themselves very much need the guidance and restraint of a senior; and in the matter of the details of their ordinary medical and surgical work both they and their patients would often derive no little peace of mind and profit by the almost constant presence of an ever available well-qualified, responsible senior colleague. The duties of a resident medical superintendent should appertain in a general and directing way to nearly every department, except perhaps the purely clerical; and, if rightly conceived, and carried out intelligently and in good faith, could not clash with any, but be of real service to all. To the honorary medical staff the office ought to ensure the highest degree of order, method, and preparedness in the operating theatre; faithful and intelligent execution of directions in the wards; the avoidance of accidents, scandals, and certain contretemps well understood by the profession, and ever prone to occur in such places where the responsibility rests on other than medical shoulders. Rightly conceived, the office would never be in rivalry with the visiting staff, whether paid or honorary, but ought to constitute a guarantee of its rights and the preserver of its honour, reputation, and security. To medical science this office ought to add treasures of hitherto unattained value. Its opportunities for preserving and classifying results, both medical and surgical, especially the former, properly utilized, might be of extraordinary importance. In fact, here is presented the means for turning usefully to account a mass of experience now lost to statistics and to science. Since the Crimean war there has sprung up in enlightened English Protestant communities a certain feeling of emulation in regard to the nursing of the sick. It is felt that it is neither creditable nor advantageous that a sphere for organized female usefulness should be abandoned to the pious heroines of other communions; the field in the unappropriated Protestant world remaining the prey of the Gamps and Prigs of modern life — veritable hospital vultures. There can be no doubt that the movement, started into activity by the example and devotion of Miss Nightingale, has by the vigorous and healthy vitality it has displayed shown itself in harmony with the sentiment and requirements of the age. I think it impossible for any unprejudiced mind experimentally cognizant of the subject, to doubt the infinite superiority of the disciplined nurse of the Nightingale school to the wretched survival of the dark ages of medicine still lingering in certain unsavoury regions. I readily admit that women placed in such positions of authority as that of superintending nurse of a hospital have a tendency to assume pontifical airs, and that a conventual nursing sisterhood in a large establishment may develope some inconvenient features. These peculiarities, however, spring from a good source; are susceptible of being moderated by quiet influences; and are only liable to become pronounced and aggressive when directors become apathetic and indifferent, and the medical staff abnegate their position and ignore their responsibilities. The functions of a nursing sisterhood, and of its head, are so definite, and the supremacy of the medical mind, if I may so express myself, so obviously necessary in an hospital, that unpleasant conflict ought to be impossible, and would be where good faith and common sense should hold their natural sway. In a new country like New South Wales, where the raw materials for women's higher concerted work are neither abundant nor apt, so important a matter as the maintenance in efficiency of a sisterhood of nurses can only be compassed through much discouragement, by considerable tact, and after great labour and perseverance. In matters such as the engagement of young women, allotment of offices, selection of nurses for particular duties, topics of admonitory discipline, dismissal of nurses, &c., would usually be found more convenient to entrust to the office of matron, not, however, without the knowledge or concurrence of the medical superintendent. On the other hand, the latter would be found the safer officer to rule in all medical and mechanical details, and questions of order and discipline among patients and pupils. Unhappily, an all-absorbing anxiety for self, especially on the part of our profession, and matters of a polemical character, have, in connection with this question, too often been permitted to overcome considerations of theoretical perfection and pratical utility. In all hospitals the medical pupil plays no inconsiderable part. It is his privilege, or ought to be, to perform all the purely medical or surgical drudgery of the wards, such as "case taking," bandaging, a certain amount of dressing, microscopical and chemical analyses, taking sphygmographic, temperature, and other observations, &c., &c. The majority of intelligent students, whose minds are not oppressed by fears in connection with examinations in classics and mathematics invariably apply themselves with great zeal to hospital work, and their services are extremely useful. My own observation and experience have long induced the conviction that the most potent cause of all the shortcomings in medical practice, the failures in medical life, the want of public appreciation, and the absence of the influence natural to the medical vocation, are traceable to the chaos obtaining in the matter of medical education. The State in England has most unwisely delegated nearly all her functions in regulating medical education to the identical parasites who exist at the expense of the student; with the natural result that the latter is completely sacrificed. The so-called "Medical Councils" being composed of delegates, from the different examining boards, mainly struggle to keep the student in pecuniary and other bonds, and secure as many fees as public patience and ignorance will permit them. Any consideration touching the suitability of their systems to perfect the medical character and secure the efficiency of the practitioner but in the least degree appear to occupy their thoughts. What the majority of examining boards desire is the privilege of selling as many diplomas as they can find purchasers for, whether the candidates for these have been educated and plucked or not. What the public demands is that the regulations should be based on experience and justice, and enable the efficient practitioner to be matured with the greater certainty, least waste of money and time, and minimum risk to his health, life, and morals. As the liberality of the State is likely to place at the service of the citizens of New South Wales an excellent school of medicine, with any future number of affiliated hospitals, an opportunity will soon be presented to us of making a new departure in medical education and examination. The time is rapidly approaching for the organisation of the Sydney University Medical School, and I think the profession in the city may just now very profitably devote some thought to the subject. I believe if the rank and file of the profession were polled to-morrow, they would almost unanimously affirm—1st. The desirability of passing the primary mathematical and classical examinations before entering on the study of medical subjects, even as an apprentice or hospital pupil. 2nd. That bona fide apprenticeship for a limited period of a year or so is of great advantage in familiarising a youth with medical terms, imparting at the onset of his career a feeling of responsibility, and in affording him an opportunity for acquiring a knowledge of rudimentary details, without which much of the instruction communicated in hospital and college life is for a considerable time necessarily unintelligible. It is, in my judgment, essential that every pupil in a hospital should have definite work, and be compelled to perform it, and that no hospital should be permitted to receive fees from students for whom they cannot provide adequate clinical opportunities. The practice still obtaining in England of "walking the hospitals" where there is a popular operator is a fatal fraud, ruinous to the student, morally and intellectually, injurious to hospital discipline, and so compromising to honour and sense of common honesty, that it is surprising the practice should continue. It may be safely asserted that the welfare of each hospital patient depends as much on the work of the clinical student as on the penetration of the physician or the skill of the surgeon. The student, indeed, should be the right hand of the latter, in "case taking," dressing, &c. The question of honorary hospital services is a vexed one in England. It has long been solved in most countries on the Continent. Whatever may appear to the public, there can be small doubt that in nearly all professional circles it is not approved of, though submitted to. In hospitals, which are at the same time clinical schools, all the junior and some of the senior appointments are practically not honorary; and in them the work is for the most part done with remarkable efficiency. In unattached country and other hospitals, work of the honorary visiting staff is too frequently perfunctorily performed, and is necessarily very imperfect. This result is attributable to the personal pecuniary necessities of the staff, who give their private patients precedence over their hospital charges. In the clinical hospitals several circumstances concur to render the medical services in the highest degree effective; not the least influential of these, however, being the indirect or direct payments received. I have never yet perceived any distinctive advantages appertaining to the honorary system, and have found the ordinary disadvantages of it intensified in capital colonial cities—so much so, indeed, as to have inspired a feeling that a visiting staff was altogether unnecessary, and should be superseded by paid resident medical officers; an error which, in practice, would be found more fatal to efficiency than even the honorary system. The principle of a visiting staff in large hospitals is essentially good, but is too often associated with honorary services, with which, however, it has no necessary connection. Consulting Staff: The want of a clear understanding with reference to the functions of "Consulting Medical Officers" has terminated in their practical deprivation of all function. The circumstance is regrettable, and cannot, it appears to me, be justified on grounds either of expediency, or principle, and the practical degradation of the office is probably chiefly attributable to the impetuosity and presumption of youth, as displayed by the usually younger acting "honorary staff," who too often forget that in many cases no advantages of scholastic learning, nor of manual skill, can compensate for qualities accruing from matured experience and a well-practised judgment. I believe, if the duties of this office were carried out in their integrity, and protected by special regulations from becoming a practical fraud or fiction or ornamental appendage as regards either hospital or individual, and their services were to be paid for when invoked, it would be found to be as useful, as honourable, and as welcome to the acting staff as to the consultants. Its tendency, moreover, would be to cement by a common responsibility interests otherwise almost divergent; and contribute powerfully to enhance the value of the treatment received by the most serious cases in the institution. This paper was suggested to my mind by the practical disorganisation of not a few of the principal hospitals in Great and Greater Britain. I have viewed my subject principally from a local standpoint. I trust, however, that an abler pen than mine will soon be wielded by some home member of our cosmopolitan association in the interest of right principles of hospital government and efficient detailed management. I know of no writing or authority on the subject; but believe its systematic and minute treatment by a small committee of the parent society would be as profitable to the interests of our vocation as it would be welcome to many a rising community, and conducive to our reputation for public usefulness and patriotism.

SYDNEY HOSPITAL.

The first meeting of the directors of the Sydney Hospital was held yesterday afternoon, in the large room of the Nightingale Wing. The Hon. Dr. Renwick, president, was in the chair, and the directors present were—Rev. Canon Stephen, Messrs. J. R. Street, L. J. Josephson, J. Harris (Mayor), F. Abigail, M.L.A., J. Graham, F. Senior, S. Burdekin, M.L.A., M. Chapman, H. E. A. Allan, E. Hordern, C. J. Roberts, R. Fowler, R. B. Smith, M.L.A., J. Alger, J. Donovan, J. Davies, M.L.A., T. Slattery, M.L.A., B. M'Coy, W. M. Alderson, and Drs. Cox and M'Kay.

The CHAIRMAN explained that the business of the meeting was the consideration of a number of preliminary matters which must be dealt with without delay. He then stated the names of the gentlemen who had been elected as directors by the subscribers, and also the names of those who had been appointed by the Government, and said that those gentlemen would now form the board. He apprehended that they would have to wait for a few days until the medical staff elected their two representative directors. He would suggest that in the first place it was very desirable that, until the new by-laws were framed and adopted, they should act in accordance with former precedents, and with the rules and by-laws at present in force for governing the institution. There would be nothing illegal in doing this, and they would thus be enabled to press on with the business. If a resolution to that effect were passed they could go on with some business this afternoon, and then be prepared at their next meeting to consider in detail the new by-laws, which were now being framed.

Mr. SENIOR moved that the present rules be adopted until the new by-laws are framed and adopted by the board.

Mr. BURDEKIN seconded the motion, which was carried without dissent.

Dr. M'KAY said he thought the Act of Parliament that had just been passed empowered the old board to continue in office until the new board was formed; and in his opinion this would not be the case until the medical staff elected their representative directors.

The CHAIRMAN said he did not think any difficulty could arise from that matter.

Dr. BELGRAVE rose to speak, when

The CHAIRMAN said he did not think Dr. Belgrave had any locus standi at the meeting.

Dr. COX said that Dr. Belgrave hoped the medical representatives would be on the board before the by-laws were passed.

The CHAIRMAN said the present representative medical directors would continue to hold office until the new by-laws were framed and until their successors were appointed.

The Chairman then read the accounts for the month of December, as follows:—Salaries and wages, £313 19s. 3d.; district surgeons, £112 10s.; provisions, £217 11s.; groceries, £54 5s. 7d.; wine, beer, and spirits, £3 5s.; fuel, £47 19s. 7d.; printing, stationery, &c., £37 0s. 9d.; furniture, £36 11s. 11d.; branch dispensary, £35 11s.; drugs, £233 11s. 5d.; surgical instruments and appliances, £117 9s. 5d.; coffins and funerals, £7 10s.; commission, £10; washing, £52 2s. 1d.; sundries, £33 0s. 7d.; petty expenses, £23 8s. 6d.; drapery, clothing, &c., £52 5s. 9d.—total, £1388 1s. 10d. The accounts were passed.

The CHAIRMAN also said that there were some other accounts, viz., clerk of works, £24; Mr. Alston's contract in regard to the permanent structure, £2000; and Messrs. Bignell and Clark, finishing the kitchen, £354 19s. 4d. Formal certificates had been received from the architect to the effect that the works for which these amounts were charged had been duly performed.

These accounts were also passed; and on the motion of Mr. Davies, the tenders for supplies for the year 1882 were referred to a sub-committee consisting of Messrs. Josephson, Senior, Hordern, R. B. Smith, and the hon. treasurer, for their report.

The CHAIRMAN reported that there were now two vacancies in the medical staff, and that there would shortly be a third. He thought that the applications which had been received to fill these vacancies should be dealt with in the usual way, viz., submitted to the honorary medical staff for their report. When that was received they could proceed to the election.

The Chairman's suggestion was acted upon.

The Secretary read a letter from Messrs. A. M'Arthur and Co. complaining of the conduct of one of the medical staff in the treatment of a patient sent to the institution by them.

The CHAIRMAN said their usual course was to refer letters of this kind to the officer concerned for his report, and he did not think they should depart from it in this case. (Hear, hear.)

It was resolved to act in accordance with the suggestion of the chairman.

The Secretary read the bank statement, which showed that there was a credit balance of £2320 19s., and the chairman laid upon the table list of patients in hospital, together with the district surgeons' reports.

The CHAIRMAN then said he had no doubt that by that day week, with the assistance of some of the honorary members of the board, the new bylaws would be prepared for submission to the next meeting of the board. It had been a work of time to consider these bylaws—(hear, hear)—but he hoped to have them ready by that day week. He would therefore like to ask the board now to postpone the consideration of any fresh bylaws for the present, as it would be utterly impossible to deal with them properly now.

Canon STEPHEN said he would suggest that the by-laws be printed and distributed amongst the members of the board. If this were not done, their next meeting would be a waste of time. They would want at least three or four days to consider the new by-laws.

The CHAIRMAN said he hoped to have them printed and circulated by that day week, and if they could be got ready before that time they would be distributed.

After some conversational discussion, in which it was pointed out that sufficient time should be given to the board to peruse and consider the bylaws before the meeting,

Mr. DAVIES moved,—"That the matter of the bylaws be postponed until some time subsequent to their being printed and circulated amongst the members."

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon. TREASURER announced the receipt of a letter, without signature, and with £20 enclosed, of which the following is a copy:—"Please will you be kind enough to give this donation towards the Sydney Infirmary, from a friend." On the motion of the hon. treasurer, Mr. William Wolfen was appointed a life member of the institution.

The meeting then terminated.

LONG and FAITHFUL SERVICE is recognised sometimes, though often forgotten when not needed. But those who are well served during nearly a fifth of a century by a faithful little friend do not consult their interests by turning their backs on those who have done so well. This is evidently the case with so many of those really sensible ladies, who, having had a WILCOX and GIBBS' MACHINE for so many years, working with such satisfaction, that in seeking for another try the W. and G. AUTOMATIC SILENT, which has all the old good points, with some wonderful improvements in addition.

Parliamentary Elections.

ELECTORAL DISTRICT OF REDFERN.

A VACANCY having occurred in the Electoral District of Redfern, in consequence of the resignation of John Sutherland, Esq., the Nomination of a Member to fill the vacancy will take place on MONDAY, the ninth day of January, at the Town Hall, Redfern, and if there should be more than one Candidate nominated, the Polling and Election will take place on WEDNESDAY, the 11th day of January.

GEO. RENWICK, Returning Officer.

TO THE ELECTORS OF REDFERN.

Gentlemen,—At the request of a large and influential body of electors, I beg to announce myself as a candidate for a seat in the Legislative Assembly, vacated by the resignation of the Hon. John Sutherland.

An expression of my views on the leading public questions of the day must necessarily be brief in an address of this kind. I will therefore, at present, touch but lightly on a few of the leading questions, and will avail myself of an early opportunity of meeting the electors in all parts of the electorate, and will then enter more fully into my political views.

Education.—I am a staunch and thorough supporter of the present system of Public Instruction, and believe that any amendments that may be found necessary should be made on its present lines, so as to make it broader and more comprehensive in its application.

Local Government.—I strongly approve of local self-government in its broadest sense, as it is only by making the people self-reliant that any nation can become great and prosperous. Moreover, nothing will tend more to make the members of our Legislature free from Government control than a general system of self-government with liberal endowment on a fixed principle from the State.

Immigration I am in favour of, if conducted upon a system of careful selection so as to suit the requirements of the colony—believing that an increased population of a desirable class will bring prosperity to all.

Railways and tramways should, in my opinion, be constructed wherever there is a fair prospect of their paying interest on the outlay, believing that rapid and cheap transit both for goods and passengers means a large annual saving to the whole community.

The Land Laws should, I think, be amended, and the colony divided where practicable into grazing and agricultural areas, so that lessees of Crown lands should have a fixed tenure for a reasonable term, but at a considerably increased rental, while sufficient areas should at all times be reserved so that the settlement of the country by free selectors should not be interfered with. I am entirely opposed to the remission of interest on selectors' unpaid balances.

Fiscal policy.—I am a free-trader, but as revenue must be raised I think the customs duties should be levied as lightly as possible on articles of general consumption, and that a greater portion of such revenue should be collected upon imported luxuries, most of which at present are allowed into the country free of duty. I fully believe that every encouragement and support should be given by the Government to our local industries, not by a system of protective duties, but by offering every inducement and facility to our local manufacturers, consistent with economy and efficiency, to compete for the requirements of our extensive and ever-increasing public works and railways, thereby providing avenues of honest artizanship for the youths of our large towns and cities more especially.

I shall, if elected, be prepared to give the present Government a fair and liberal support so long as they legislate and govern for the best interests of the colony.

My long residence in and identification with the electorate will at all times ensure my paying every attention to your requirements should you do me the honour to return me as one of your representatives.

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
F. A. WRIGHT.

TO THE ELECTORS OF REDFERN.

Gentlemen,—As a candidate for the vacancy in the Redfern Electorate, I proceed to give you in precis my views on some of the most important political questions.

I deem the Education question settled for the present. The Act now in force did not pass until after the question had been very fully and exhaustively discussed both in and out of Parliament, and if elected I should oppose any reopening of the question. As a matter of fact, however, I am strongly in favour of the present Act.

I am in favour of the principle of Free Trade. I notice that our local industries flourish, notwithstanding they are not fostered by protective duties. I cannot help thinking that the present prosperous state of the colony is, to some extent, due to the Free-Trade principles consistently advocated by the present and previous Governments.

I consider the amended Publicans' Act a beneficial measure. The three main principles embodied in the Act have my cordial approval, namely, the transfer of the power to grant licenses to a special Licensing Board of seven members, the additional powers of supervision given to the police, and the local option clauses, giving the right to eleven-twentieths of the ratepayers in any locality to prevent any additional houses being licensed in such locality for a period of three years.

I am in favour of a judicious system of assisted immigration, believing, as I do, that the colony instead of supporting three-quarters of a million of people, is capable of supporting many millions.

I should oppose any additional taxes on articles of daily consumption; but, if any further taxes should be needed, I should be in favour of more fixity of tenure being given to lessees of runs, and such lessees being made to give a largely increased rental.

I am in favour of the extension of railways and tramways.

My intention is, if elected, to give the present Government my cordial support.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
GEORGE JAMES SLY.

WILLIAM JARRETT, Manager.

BUILDING SOCIETY ADVANTAGES COMBINED WITH LIFE ASSURANCE.

The Directors of the INDUSTRIAL and PROVIDENT PERMANENT BUILDING and INVESTMENT SOCIETY have now made arrangements by which, on a small additional sum being paid monthly or in one sum, Borrowers' mortgages will be redeemed in case of the death of the Borrowers during the currency of their loans.

Example.—A person, age 25, by paying £1 3s 8d per month for 10 years, may leave his property free should he die before that time; the ordinary repayments for a loan of £100 being £1 2s 6d per month. Or a person making the ordinary payments on a loan of £100, may leave his property free by ac payment of single £6 1s 9d.

Again, he may insure the redemption of £10 or any multiple number of this sum, for one year, by paying 3s for each £10 at risk. Existing borrowers can thus insure the whole or any portion of the sum now owing by them, and as they pay off their loans yearly, so they can reduce the premium equal to the amount actually owing or at risk by them.

Tables, and all further information, can be obtained at the Society's Offices, 171, York-street, Sydney.
